KEEN RIVALRY IS SHOWN AT POLLS

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION OPENS

VOTE IS HEAVY WITH ELECTION LAW WELL KEPT

Local Politics Claims First Interest With Rival Factions Expressing Confidence—Polls Close at 7:28 and Complete Returns Will Be Late.

At half-past one o'clock this afternoon the following votes had been cast at the city voting precincts:

First Ward	235
Second Ward	248
Third Ward	86
Fourth Ward	372
Fifth Ward	167
Sixth Ward	133
Total	1,241

Approximately 2,000 are qualified to vote today.

Business in Danville is virtually suspended today on account of the interest in the municipal election which has eclipsed everything else Not in many years has such keen speculation been indulged in as to the outcome of the five different issues which are before the qualified voters of the city for a settlement as those figuring in today's test. A mayoralty election in Danville where there is opposition is always absorbing but today there are, in addition to the fate of Captain Wooding, the election of nine councilmen and the school, streets and sewer bond issues all claiming their proportionate share of public interest.

The polls which opened at ten minutes to five o'clock this morning will remain open until two minutes before half past seven tonight when will be started the task of counting the contents of the three ballot boxes which are in each one of the six voting precincts today. The plan is, it is understood, to first count the general election ticket tonight, that is, the votes received by the mayoral candidates and those received by the nineteen candidates for the council these to be announced before the more complex task of counting the freehold and non freehold votes in the two ballot boxes for the bond issues, and the striking of the majorities, which will govern success or failure. It is highly probable that the final returns will not be available until about eleven o'clock.

For the first time in years a formal request was made by the chairman of the electoral board of the city authorities to have a policeman stationed at every ward. This letter was received by Mayor Harry Wooding and was turned over by him to Chief of Police James R. Bell, who at once complied with it. The purpose of the placing of officers at the six precincts has no special significance. The officers are primarily needed to carry out the provisions of the election law upon request of the judges. It was generally observed this morning that the judges at every ward were scrupulously obeying the letter of the law. Only one voter was allowed to enter the voting booth at a time and the Fourth Ward, this resulted in a slowing down of the vote and in the formation of a line of prospective voters sometimes as many as twenty-five to thirty persons in length waiting to perform the civic obligation. One man said this morning that it was twenty minutes before he could vote at the Fourth Ward, and there were others who waited even longer.

Workers representing conflicting factions manned the polls as soon as they opened and both did considerable missionary work around the polls, keeping a safe distance from the booths but being nonetheless active in final persuasions. As usual large placards exhorting the voter to vote this ticket and that ticket and to vote for and against the bonds were in evidence as were neatly prepared cards, showing the voter how to vote the Citizen Ticket and the Good Government Ticket. Friends of both mayoral candidates were in evidence at all the booths and plans early this afternoon were made for motor transportation to the polls of those found not to have cast their vote. It is understood that the mailed vote is of good size.

Interest, as usual centred on the second ward which has always been regarded as a fairly clear index as to local sentiment since people voting there represent the varied phases of community life. A close follower of local politics said this morning that the second ward results had never failed to indicate the final result of any campaign.

The question of contest was discussed today in the event of B. J. Hurd being among the leading nine members for council. The City Attorney after combing the records of cases finds no ruling case in Virginia but a majority of cited cases in the law books from other states show that the date of holding office is controlling and it matters not if Mr. Hurd is ineligible at the present time. It is possible that the Hurd case may be the first in Virginia to go to the Supreme Court for a construction of the actual meaning of the eligibility clause, should a contest be staged.

Voting in the second ward today is in the corporation courtroom as in the past. Judge McLemore completed the civil docket yesterday evening and so it was not necessary to have the voting booth on the lower floor of the courthouse as planned.

The results of the election now in course will be announced in front of the Bee office tonight though it will be late before the complete returns are in. Interest in the election is not confined to Danville. Several calls from rural sections around Danville were received this morning from anxious enquirers who sought some indication of the trend, especially on the mayoral contest.

An exceptionally heavy vote was being polled at the fourth ward, at which point, workers for the rival council tickets were unusually active.

GLASS BOOM IS GROWING

VA. DELEGATES TO SUPPORT HIM FOR PRESIDENCY

State Convention of Democrats Will Open Tomorrow In Norfolk

(By The Associated Press.)

NORFOLK, Va., June 10.—Determined opposition to Wm. G. McAdoo, for the Democratic presidential nomination and hearty support of Senator Carter Glass for that honor was expressed here today by State Senator Harry F. Byrd, chairman of the Democratic state committee.

Senator Byrd's views were given upon his arrival to attend a meeting of the state committee tonight. The state convention will be held tomorrow.

Among prominent party leadtrs who arrived early today to attend the convention, besides Senator Byrd, were United States Senator Claude A. Swanson; Representative J. Murray Hooker of the Fifth district; Representative T. W. Harrison of the Seventh district; C. C. Carlin, of Alexandria, who is managing the campaign of Oscar W. Underwood in Virginia, and W. E. Carson, chairman of the Seventh district Democratic committee.

The Democratic state central committee will meet at 8 o'clock tonight, in the city council chambers to hear contests and consider a new party plan which will be presented to the convention for adoption tomorrow. The changes proposed are necessary Mr. Byrd explained, to reconcile the party plan with the new primary law.

Contests have been filed from Culpepper, Cumberland and Princess Anne Counties and a dispute between Norfolk county and Norfolk city as to which is entitled to delegates from the territory recently annexed by the city also will be settled.

Congressional district conventions will be held at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. At these meetings the delegates from each congressional district will assemble and elect two delegates to the New York convention twenty in all.

The convention which will elect eight delegates at large with a half vote each will meet at noon.

Senator Carter Glass, who will deliver the principal address of the convention, will speak tomorrow night.

The address by Senator Glass will be broadcast by radio.

"Recent editorials in the Winchester Star have reflected my views," said Senator Harry F. Byrd, who is the owner of that newspaper. "I feel sure it is the wish of the people of Virginia to support Senator Glass until nominated. A perfunctory support with the thought in mind of a second choice would not be tolerated by the electorate who sent us to this convention.

"Senator Glass stands for sound, sane legislation in the best interests not only of the farmers but of the business people of the United States. He is as reluctant as McAdoo is eager to get the nomination, feeling, I suppose, the weight of responsibility that the office of president begets.

"I do not believe the people of Virginia want McAdoo. Regardless of his unfortunate connection with oil and his departmental activities, he does not reflect the views of the farming and business people of the state. Virginia is not thinking radically at this time. Serious problems are confronting us today. Business is daily sagging to a lower level and to nominate a man who has not the complete confidence and does not reflect the opinion of sound thinking people would, I fear, mean a withdrawal from activity of forces necessary to the welfare of the country.

"Virginia is progressive, but not radical.

"Senator Glass is the most conspicuously available Democrat for the presidential nomination. Virginia delegates should go to New York with no other thought except to support him as long as there is any possible chance of his nomination. It will then be time enough, if that time comes, to decide upon the proper candidate to support.

"To send a delegation ostensibly for Glass but willing to desert to McAdoo would not be consistent with proper fidelity to the interest of Mr. Glass, or, in my judgment, to the interests of the Democratic party."

Dr. Gamble Speaks to Bible Students

Dr. R. A. Gamble, of Petersburg, addressed three audiences at the Owls Hall here Sunday, speaking to the local class of International Bible students twice and in the afternoon to a public audience. The attendance was good at all three sermons, especially in the afternoon. Dr. Gamble is well-known by all Bible students being a gifted speaker and one who holds the attention of his hearers at all times.

Sunday morning at 10 o'clock Dr. Gamble addressed the local Bible Students Association using for his text Daniels, 8:27. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon he made a public address to a large audience, speaking on "All Nations Marching to Armageddon," taken from the text Isiah 45: 12, 13. He held the attention of the audience for an hour and a half, relating to them the good time in store for the people when Christ's kingdom is fully set on earth. At 8 o'clock he again addressed the students on "The Church Triumph," the text being Psalm 45.

PRES. COOLIDGE SILENTLY DOMINATES CONVENTION AS IT GETS UNDERWAY

(By David Lawrence, Copyright 1924)

CONVENTION HALL, CLEVELAND, June 10.—The Republican National Convention has developed these three distinct characteristics thus far.

First, that there should be no catering to the radicals and LaFollette group, no compromises, no attitude which begs support, nothing but a polite and tolerant indifference.

Second, that the Republican record in congress and the individualists who have mussed up the legislative program should not lead the party here or guide its counsels but should be in the background while the Coolidge management proclaims the party purposes and policies.

Third, that the Republican platform shall be in accord with what Mr. Coolidge wanats it to be on all controversial questions, including the soldier bonus, the world court and agricultural problems.

Taking up these points in order, one finds that the movement which originated in Wisconsin to have the convention here adopt a resolution pledging all the delegates in advance to support whoever is nominated will not be followed through for the simple reason that to have such a battle with the LaFollette group means the proposal on their part of a substitute resolution asking the party to repudiate Albert B. Fall and Harry H. Daugherty. This would lead to an open breach in which the radicals would embarrass the convention as a whole and give the Wisconsin group the excuse they are aching for to desert the Republican party in favor of an independent ticket.

Instead, the regulars from Wisconsin believe it is far more satisfactory from the viewpoint of party strategy to let the LaFollette delegates sit throughout the Republican convention as Republicans so that the impulse in voting will come from that side rather than the majority.

Regulars recognize the LaFollette insurgency as inevitable and as irreconcilable. They will do nothing to placate it. On the other hand, there is a growing desire to treat it with defiance and boldly proclaim conservatism as a virtue. Such a note would unquestionably strike an enthusiastic response in this convention which already regards party infidelity with contempt. There is also the feeling that since Senator LaFollette has made up his mind to run, nothing would be gained by giving his followers an exaggerated importance in the convention which from publicity viewpoint might be to their advantage later on.

As for the "Old Guard" and Congress, the Coolidge leaders are playing for a public impression of independence. They want the people who are resentful of congressional inefficiency to realize that the party as a whole has no sympathy with it and under the circumstances, the effort to make accord the platform with the president's speeches and addresses to congress is proceeding smoothly and without interference by the congressional leaders, many of whom are astute enough politicians to appreciate that perhaps the unpopularity of Congress the strategy of the Coolidge managers may not be unwise after all.

On the world court, the Coolidge-Harding-Hughes idea of American membership in the world court created by the League of Nations will prevail.

On the soldier bonus, the platform will not "point with pride" to the adjusted compensation bill which congress passed but will contend itself with a general declaration of satisfaction over what the Republican party has done for the veterans of the world war, especially the disabled men, and their probably will be an expression of gratitude about the veterans generally so as to offset some of the criticism leveled at the president in his recent veto message on the bonus when he said in effect that the government owed the soldiers and sailors nothing for their services in the war.

On agricultural questions, no specific measure will be adverted but a principle of helpfulness will be enunciated.

The platform will be draft. Its first draft was made in Washington congressional leaders who have been consulted about it and cabinet members who have read it, speak of it as a rather lengthy document but then platforms have to be nowadays to encompass all the subjects which must be included to satisfy the various elements in the electorate including the women voters When the platform is finished it will be described by its proponents as liberal and progressive without any note of impractical radicalism. It will contain no startling pronouncements but will simply be a reiteration of Coolidge doctrines as heretofore expounded.

The vice presidential situation is truly up to the delegates themselves The choice will be made on the floor after the nominating speeches are made and it would not be surprising to see a number of complimentary votes given to various Republicans in order to feel out the sentiment of the convention. The Illinois delegation has voted to petition former Governor Lowden to reconsider his refusal to run. The plan has been for Illinois to place his name in nomination first with Alabama. First on the roll call, yielding to Illinois for that purpose, but Mr. Lowden's emphatic declaration over the telephone that he could not accept even if named has upset the plans of the Illinois delegation

Several states have been ready to join the movement to draft Lowden and it is inconceivable that any man would actually refuse to accept if the nomination came unanimous. Mr Lowden may yet be drafted, but his threat to decline is preventing a settlement of the vice presidential situation in advance of the balloting. Next to owden no man has any particular strength. Sentimen has faild o crystalize on any second choice, and the leaders here would like to have President Coolidge pick a man. But his managers shrewdly refuse to do so and want the convention to take the initiative thought in the last analysis a word from William M. Butler, the Coolidge chieftain, will probably avoid a prolonged contest and throw enough votes to a particular candidate to end the contest whenever it is discreet for the administration to do so.

A committee headed by Representative Madden, of Illinois, has been appointed bf the Illinois delegation to ronfer with Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois and urge him to acrept the vice presidential nomination he will be told, friends of President Coolidge, hope he will accept. Should Mr. Lowden finally decline as seems likely the whole house favors the selection for vice president, Judge William S. Kenyon, of Iowa, for whom there is already a definite senticent among the delegates.

Flag Day Event Saturday Will Draw Big Crowd

Practically all preparations have been completed for next Saturday's observance on a large scale of Flag Day, with a public meeting in the Tabernacle under the auspices of the Danville Lodge of Elks. The meeting will begin at 2:3 o'clock and will be a rousing patriotic service commemorating the anniversary of the national emblem. Don Halsey, of Lynchburg, is to be the principal orator of the day.

Patriotic orders of the city are making plans to attend the event if possible as a body, in order to make it more impressive, those being unable to do so taking steps to have a large attendance of their members. Sections will be set apart for these bodies.

The Boy Scots have been requested and urged to assist the Elks in every way that they can in making this an impressive celebration of their patriotism and thus influence the younger generation of the value and significance of the Flag and that for which it stands. It is hoped that each troop can attend in a body with the Flag.

The preliminary concert which Professor Vezzetti has promised on the front of the Elks Club will be in itself an interesting feature of the day's celebration.

The American Legion is taking a great interest in the event and all its members are endeavoring to be present

CANDIDATE FOR VICE-PRESIDENT YET UNDECIDED

1924 PLATFORM OF REPUBLICANS NOW COMPLETED

Task Finished After Session Lasting Into Early Morning Hours.

(By The Associated Press.)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 10.—A tentative draft of the 1924 platform of the Republican party had been completed today after a group of members of the resolutions committee had labored.

The resolutions committee had labored into the early morning hours and obtained the views of President Coolidge by telephone on certain planks.

Chairman Charles B. Warren, of the committee, which could not be organized until the opening session today of the convention, explained that this draft would form the basis upon which the committee would work after the five hours of hearings during the day. The platform will be ready for action by the convention Wednesday afternoon.

After hours of conference, the platform builders made some changes last night in the suggested planks brought here by Secretary Slemp, with President Coolidge's sanction. The foreign relations provision was materially revised and it is understood that it was upon this subject particularly that the executive was consulted by long distance telephone.

Having obtained Mr. Coolidge's views on the changes, Chairman Warren and his co-workers resumed their conference and it was after midnight before their task was done.

With reference to tax reduction, the platform, it was stated authoritatively will make no specific reference to the Mellon plan, but will contain a broad declaration for tax revision and reforms.

The world court plank was described as a straight out declaration of American adherence to the court of International Justice without specific recommendations as to the form of adherence.

The soldiers bonus has been treated by the platform builders as an accomplished fact and the only reference, if any, will be a declaration for execution of the law placed on the statute books over President Coolidge's veto.

There will be a provision, however, as to the treatment of the sick and disabled veterans of the world war.

Another of the suggested planks, which was re-written was that dealing in wrong doing in public office. As now drawn this provision makes no mention of individuals but declares for punishment where guilt is clearly established.

The national defense plank would declare for the military training for all citizens who wish to be trained and delegates specifically with the civilian military training camps and the officers' reserve corps. For the navy it would declare for the building up and maintenance, of sea force to the full strength permitted the United States under the Washington treaty.

WANT NOMINEE NOTED AS A LOUD SPEAKER

(By The Associated Press.)

CLEVELAND, O., June 10.— Some G. O. P. delegates appear to think the vice presidential nominee must be noted as a loud speaker, whatever other qualifications he has. They argue that if President Coolidge is going to campaign from Washington his running mate ought to have the vocal equipment of a radio announcer and be prepared to carry the Republican platform gospel out in to the tall timbers at first hand.

That is one of the serious objections made in corridor gossip to secretary Hoover and some others. The gossipers contend that the secretary does not even fancy himself as an orator.

Of course, they say, the situation doesn't call for a man who talks too much and says too little and the result has been an informal canvass of the talking powers of a notable group of party celebrities. It had not resulted overnight in any agreement as to who should win the palm on that count.

One bright thought evolved into the argument was that it was going to be a radio campaign anyhow. That being so, it was said, why worry about an orator? a well prepared speech is what counts "on the air," not its manner of delivery.

Move For Kenyon Shows Strength With Talk For Hoover Stronger—Dawes Also Mentioned.

(By the Associated Press.)

CONVENTION HALL, CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 10.—Coming to order promptly on scheduled time, the Republican national convention devoted its first session today to perfecting the temporary organization and hearing the keynote speech by Representative Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio, temporary chairman.

Chairman Adams, of the national committee, brought the gavel down promptly at 11 o'clock and routine organization work was quickly disposed of. Full delegations on the floor and galleries well filled, but not crowded, followed closely the speech of the chairman which sounded the keynote of the coming campaign.

(By The Associated Press.)

CONVENTION HALL, CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 10.—Still searching for a vice presidential candidate, the Republican national convention went into its first session today, with the question little advanced toward solution. Booms paused for a moment in their flight, platform builders suspended their work and delegates ceased their milling while all assembled in the great hall with its thirteen thousand seats to start the convention off on its way.

Overnight the movement for Judge Wm. S. Kenyon, of Iowa, showed new strength; the talk for Secretary Hoover grew stronger, the movement for Charles G. Dawes certainly lost no ground and the Lowden supposters renewed their stubborn resistance to the former governor's reiterated determination not to accept the nomination if it were offered.

Many new faces appeared where old familiar faces have been in the memorable years gone by. For the first time in years Chauncey M. Depew was not on hand to enjoy a reception that has always resembled a new year's day handshaking bee at the White House. For the first time since a Republican convention nominated Abraham Lincoln, "Uncle Joe" Cannon was absent and the convention missed his "the ladies, God bless them."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was not in the little circle of convention managers, the inconspicuous "steering committee" that has so much to say of what will be done.

In their places of power today were a new set of men, chosen by President Coolidge and headed by Wm. Butler. The doors of the great hall were thrown open to ticket holders at 9 o'clock but the delegates did not begin arriving until the clock moved toward eleven, the hour of meeting.

Most of the members of the resolutions, credentials and rules committees were selected at state delegation caucuses yesterday, although some remained to be named today before the opening of the convention.

With the main planks of the platform in place, even though not nailed down, plenty of opportunity was given for the new ascent of the Lowden boom and of others which seemed to have gathered strength during its temporary deflation, including those of Charles G. Dawes, secretary Hoover and, among the dark-horses, Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, of Michigan, whose friends predict that his stock will rise greatly after his speech Thursday placing President Coolidge in nomination.

The Lowden trend among delegates from all sections of the country came to a head last night in the unanimous decision of the Illinois caucus to present his name to the convention and vote for him as a unit, despite his flat announcement that he would not accept the nomination.

This eliminated fears that had been expressed by some of his supporters that factional differences in the state might weaken his candidacy and a committee was immediately authorized to notify the former governor of the caucus decision. A telegram urging his acceptance "as a duty to the party and the country" and asking for a quick reply was promptly sent to Miami, Ohio, where Mr. Lowden was thought to be and a duplicate was dispatched to Oregon, Ill., to make sure of getting some word from him before the convening of the convention.

The caucus action followed the endorsement of the Lowden candidacy by Gov. Len Small, his successor in office. Former Gov. Wm. C. Sproul, of Pennsylvania, after conferring with his delegation also sent Mr. Lowden a telegram urging him to recede from his stand and previously several other state caucuses, including those of Oregon and Kentucky, had gone on record along similar lines

The Dawes boom, meanwhile, received similar support The Nebraska delegation voted to support him "first, last and always" and Wm. W Mills, of Marietta, representing the 15th Ohio district in the convention was called upon by the Marietta College Class of fifty years ago, holding a reunion there, to give the general his support.

One of yesterday's flurries centered about Senator Watson, of Indiana, when a statement, quickly denied, was made public saying he was the choice of Dr H W Evans Grand Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, for the nomination.

The selection of R R. Brewster, of Kansas City, to place the name of Gov. Hyde of Missouri, in nomination for the second place, proved a signal for increased activity in his behalf.

TODAY'S Washington LETTER

By HARRY B. HUNT

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Last but not least of the keynoters wh owill sound their clarion calls for the political battle of 1924 comes William H. Johnston.

Maybe you don't place Johnston. He isn't a senator, nor a representative, nor a governor nor even an assemblyman. He isn't as the phrase goes, "in politics." That is, he doesn t aspire to any office He isn't running for anything. Naturally, he is interested in things political, as we are told all good citizens should be, but his interest centers around policies, not parties.

Johnston is the man who will call to order, in the B. of L. E. Auditorium in Cleveland on July 4, the meeting which will launch the independent candidacy of Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin.

The Cleveland meeting, it should be remembered, starts off as a "conference," not a convention

Theoretically, it is called as an occasion on which individuals and organizations, who believe that both old parties have gone to seed and hold no hope for future growth, can talk things over and decide what is to be done about it.

Actually, it is a meeting called to endorse as an independent candidate, opposing both old party tickets, the fighting progressive senator from Madison, Wis. No organization which will send delegates, and no individual representative who will attend, expects any other result.

La Follette's dominance over the July 4 gathering will be more complete and comprehensive even than the dominance of Coolidge over the Cleveland convention which opens today.

The meeting will be called to order by Johnston, president of the International Machinists' Union, in his capacity as chairman of the national committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

Briefly, as his keynote for the occasion, he will outline the situation that caused the gatherings to be called. He will analyze the platforms of the two old party conventions, both of which will have been completed before that time. He will present for their dissection the two old party candidates—provided the Democrats have decided on one by that date.

Then he will ask the "conference" what ilt purposes to do about it.

That is as far as the proceedings can be pictured at this time. From that point on it will be "up to the conference."

A progressive independent platform, shaped to appeal to the average individual, the white-collar worker as well as the city toiler, will be attempted And on that platform, La Follette will be asked to stand for election.

Among the organization which have been invited to send delegates to the conference are the 16 railroad brotherhoods, the most influential and numerically powerful organized group in this country; the aypographical and printing trades unions, clothing workers, metal workers, telegraphers and the whole field of organized labor

Farmers will be represented through various State and national farm organizations, such as the Farmers National Council, the Progressive party of Idaho, the Non-Partisan League of North Dakota and State farm bureau groups.

Women will have a direct representation through the Women's National Trades Union League and the Woman's Committee for Political Action.

MORE DELAY TO BONUS PAYMENTS FORSEEN

(By The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 9.—A delay of six months beyond March 1, 1925, in the distribution of cash payments under the bonus law was foreseen today by war department officials as a result of the failure of Congress to pass the deficiency bill carrying appropriations for administration of the adjusted compensation law.

Adjutant General Davis, who headed the conference of department officials having charge of bonus preparations, announced to them receipt from the president of directions that the war department take all steps possible, within the law, to expedite action on bonus applications.

General Davis was instructed also, while at the White House today, to confer directly with the director of the budget in order that the war department might expedite its plans.

Yesterday's answer:

If a pint of water weighed a pound, and a pint of sand also weighed a pound, water would be heavier than sand

For water is measured by liquid measure, which contains 28 875 cubic inches to the pint, while sand is measured by dry measure, with 33 60 cubic inches to the pint Thus it would would require only 28 875 cubic inches of water to balance 33 60 cubic inches of sand, and water would obviously be the heavier

DELEGATES SMART IN THEIR DRESS

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS

CLEVELAND June 10.— The tailormade costume is the favorite candidate for sartorial honors of the women attending the Republican National Convention

They are as unanimous in the support of the dark dress or suit, small hat, colorful scarf and smart pumps as they are of their presidential candidate or their platform

Whatever, the woman politician may have to learn about conventions, she certainly knows already how to dress

You would travel far to find a more stylish looking woman than Mrs Harry Wardman, associate member of the national committee from the District of Columbia

In her chic black suit, black sailor and red scarf she might easily pass for a style modle

Ms. Charles Sabin, of New York president of the Woman's National Republican Club and associate member of the Republican National Committee from her state, brought with her an extensive and well selected wardrobe.

Besides a black tailleur of faultless line, she has a bown silkr theepiece costume lined with the same figured silk that forms the major portion of the dress that is frankly of Paris inspiration

One of her evening gowns of black satin, low cut and very plain, is very gorgeously set off by diamond and emerald earrings.

For women can cary a tailored costume with such distinction as Mrs L. G. Woods of Pittsburg, are as effective in drapery and flowing lines, as she But she wears both exceptionally well.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth always stands out in any crowd because of the quiet elegance of her gowns She has some very smart close hats, which she invariably removes as soon as she enters the convention hall or her hotel

Another striking figure is Mrs George Orvis, of Vermont, who is associate membe of the national committee from that state and also mayor of the town of Manchester. She has a smart tailleur of navy blue with a pleated skirt, short box coat, and ascarf of Chinese red crepe.

A striking scarf worn by Mrs Florence T Criswold, associate member from Texas, is of black silk edged with alternate rows of black and white monkey fu. It usually accompanies a suit of beige.

A beautifully embroidered coat of sand colored silk is worn by Mrs Barnett E. Marks of Phoenix, Ariz. She also has some smart hats, of the type that turn away from the face

Though the women declare they have come to Cleveland on business, and that clothes are of secondary impotance at this time, it is easy to see that they did not assemble their wardrobes hurriedly or without giving considerable thought to the bringing out of their best points

SUPREME COURT ON WHISKEY PERMITS

(By The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Physicians may be prohibited by Congress from prescribing beer and malt liquor for medicinal purposes, the supreme court held today.

In an opinion by Justice Sanford in cases brought by James Everard's breweries of New York and Edward and John Burke, an importer, who attacked the Willis-Campbell act

The court declared the distinction made by congress when it permitted the prescription of spiritous and vinous liquors under the prohibition amendment and prohibited the prescription of malt liquors is not unreasonable or without a substantial justification.

"We find on the whole," Justice Sanford, announced, "no ground for disturbing the determination of Congress on the question of fact as to the reasonable-necessity in the enforcement of the 18th amendment, of prohibiting intoxicating malt liquors for medicinal purposes

"It cannot be said," he added, "that its action in this respect violated any personal rights of the appelants protected by the constitution. That it did not take their property in violation of the fifth amendment is clear."

To emphasize its position, the court declared that it was unable to say that the provisions of the Willis-Campbell act "is an arbitrary and unreasonable exercise of the power vested in Congress by the 18th amendment or that it is not appropriate legislation for its enforcement".

The court disputed the argument that there is medicinal value to beer or other intoxicating malt liquors.

THOUSANDS OF PHYSICIANS AT CHICAGO FOR MEET

CHICAGO, June 9.—Nearly 15,000 physicians, members of the American Medical Association, had registered today for the seventy-fifth annual scientific assembly of the organization Meanwhile an affiliated group, the American Radium Society, heard Dr James Ewing, of New York, refute the claim of a cure for cancer made in an announcement by Dr. J. T Clover of Toronto.

Delegates to the assembly saw radium act in a new role at a scientific exhibition held in connection with the convention. It was operating a clock and demonstrated visually for the first time a process, the discovery of which is said to have revolutionized chemical and physical science. The radium, it was declared, would keep the clock in operation for ages without winding and for 2,500 years without readjustment

Mothers, what would you give to feel easy when your little one begins to show signs of biliousness?

It is customary to think that you ought to use calomel and castor oil, but you dread giving these doses as much as the child hates to take them. And still, you dread what may happen if you use just the ordinary children's laxative.

It was to meet this very situation that I invented Liv-o-lax, and if you try it once, you won't think of using calomel again.

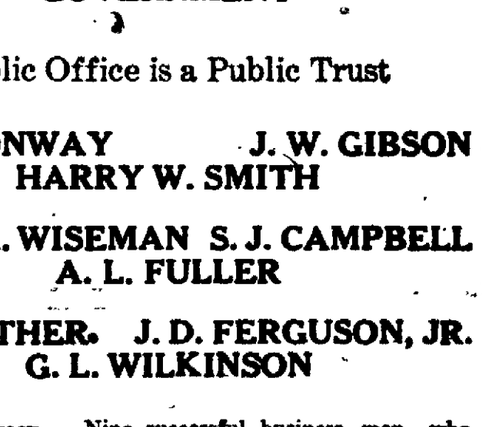

Liv-o-lax cleanses liver and bowels, too, and still it is a pleasant-tasting liquid, entirely vegetable, which causes no distress, serves equally well in colds, constipation and indigestion and is just as good for adults as it is for the children—who really love to take it.

TO TRY YOUTHS ON KIDNAPPING CHARGES FIRST

State Preparing to Combat Defense of Insanity In Case.

(By The Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, June 10.—Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Leob, admitted kidnapers and slayers of Robert Franks, millionaires song, will be tried first on charges of kidnaping for ransom preliminary to their trial on charges of murder the states attorney has decided. Both are capital offenses.

The move is planned to show the relative strength of the cases of the prosecution and defense, particularly the status of the youths' confessions, concerning which there is doubt as to their admissibility as evidence. States Attorney Crowe, who has not made a court appearance for eight years personally will direct the court prosecution.

Preparations to combat a defense of insanity, of pleas of guilty to obtain life sentences, are being made by the state.

There will be no compromise, Mr. Crowe has announced and an attempt to enter guilty pleas would result in dismissal of the cases and reindictment of the slayers.

Pleas of not guilty will be entered for both youths when they are arraigned tomorrow morning, according to Clarence S. Darrow, chief defense counsel. The state will demand an immediate trial and resist any effort to obtain a continuance later than July fifteen, the earliest possible date.

In attempts to cripple the sanity defense in the making, subpoenas have been issued for members of the faculty and more than a hundred students of the University of Chicago where Leopold and Loeb were students, to testify regarding their observations as to the mental condition of the pair.

A professor of an eastern university has been called before the grand jury to testify to Leopold's passing of an examination to enter the law school of the university two days before the killing. The prosecutors say they expect to determine if the examination could have been written by an insane person.

The chief discrepancy in the boys' confessions —who was driving the automobile in which the Franks boy was kidnaped and slain, was regarded by the state's attorney as settled yesterday by Carl Uiving, a chauffeur, who told state's attorneys he passed the machine a short time before the kidnaping and Leob was driving. Each youth has accused the other of being in the rear seat of the automobile and doing the killing. Ulving said he knew Leob quite well and had waved to him as he passed and that Leob returned the salute.

Another development yesterday was the tracing of the portable typewriter used in composing the ransom letters and found in a park lagoon Saturday as the stolen property of a University of Michigan student, who said it disappeared from his room during the Christmas holidays.

MANY ENQUIRIES FOR LOANS COME TO CREDIT CORP.

Advertisement which the Virginia Agricultural Credit Corporation has received in various parts of Virginia has resulted in several enquiries being received from distant parts of the State regarding loans, W. R. Fitzgerald, president, stated this morning in answering questions put him by a reporter relative to the progress of the corporation. His statistics show that since the organization began to function in Danville 700 loans have been already negotiated, these aggregating $100,000. Nearly all of these are loans covering a four months' period and are secured by certificates of participation owned by members of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Marketing Association, which are readily accepted as security. Mr. Fitzgerald stated this morning that loans are by no means confined to members of the organization and that others covering a period of from six to nine months can be negotiated where property is put up as security by the borrower and approved by the loan committee.

Another interesting point was revealed by Mr. Fitzgerald. The Chatham district hopes at some future date to establish a credit corporation of its own and is not identified with the local organization. The Virginia Credit Corporation, however, is prepared to grant loans to growers in that district through a financial arrangement made in Danville and loans supported by either certificates of participation or by property will be considered and loans granted on them. As more money is paid in, in the way of stock subscriptions so may the Credit Corporation widen its sphere of usefulness. Up until the present time the loans have been restricted to the South Boston, Gretna, Martinsville and Danville districts, but the field is now being widened, Mr. Fitzgerald said. Applications continue to be received at a well sustained rate and the farmers are gradually becoming familiar with the formalities which must be passed through before the loan is actually realized. This is by no means as difficult or complicated as many have been led to believe.

Mr. Fitzgerald stated this morning that the stock certificates have now been received and those who have paid up their subscriptions may have them fo rthe asking. He also urged that those who have not paid on their subscriptions do so at as early a date as possible.

The officials of the local organization are hopeful that next year the entire State will have been organized and that it will be possible to entertain applications for loans not only from tobacco growers but for other producers as well. The organization is working smoothly and is being conducted on as economic basis as is compatible with the public interest.

VIRGINIA BELIEVES THE DEMOCRATS WILL ACCEPT GLASS AND HIS PLATFORM

By ARTHUR C. JOHNSON
(Copyright, 1924, by The Bee)

RICHMOND, Va., June 10.—Virginia—over-whelmingly Democratic—is tickled to death today. She is getting ready to carry Senator Carter Glass" political platform and Senator Carter Glass himself to the national convention at New York and she believes he will oust the south's jinx, she thinks the convention will accept them both.

Democratic party leaders in Virginia expressed confidence today that the platform, which will be adopted by the Democratic national convention in New York City, would be the one written at the state convention in Norfolk, by Senator Glass next Wednesday. Senator Glass, according to Democratic wiseacres here, will be chairman of the resolutions committee and will frame the state Democratic platfom. Virginia's delegates to the national convention will body, and they believe it will be received, as Carter Glass' outline of policy was received as the backbone of the Democratic platform at San Francisco in 1920.

Those Jeffersonian wizards, who are hanging about state offices and hotels here today in preparation for next week's seances at Norfolk, further say that this platform, Carter Glass' own convictions politically, will make Carter Glass the Democratic nominee for president.

In brif, hat platform will call for: A firm attitude toward other governments; a place in the League of Nations; enforcement of the dry law; a strict conservation policy; and religious libert ya la Jefferson.

Virginia's political chiefs will attend the Norfolk convention. Representative A. J. Montague, representing the congressional district which gave American Patrick Henry, William Henry Harrison, and John Hyler will there and Representative S. Otis Bland, of the district which furnished George Washington, James Monroe and George Wythe; and Representative R. Walton Moore, mentioned as Virginia's next governor, from James Madisons and Zachary Taylors home district; and Representative Patrick Henry Drewry from the district where "John Randolph of Roanoke" was bon" and Perry St. George Tucker, from that which gave the country Wilson; and Representative Thos. W. Harrison from the district whence came the immort Jefferson himself. And all will back Carter Glass' platform—and Carter Glass.

So the program is cut and dried. The ten districts will have their delegates in Norfolk by ten a. m., Wednesday. There will short district meetings when each district will settle on its delegates to New York, and will name members of various committees. The state convention will assemble then. Within a short time the resolutions committee will frame its outline of policies. Senator Carter Glass will present it. And though the junior senator from Virginia still insists that he is for McAdoo the Virginia convention ill insists it is for Glass to the last ditch.

NOTED AUTHOR SUICIDES; ILL HEALTH CAUSE

Peter Mac Farlane, Former Actor and Preacher Puts Bullet In Head.

(By The Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Waging a losing battle with ill health, Peter Clark MacFarlane, noted author and former actor and preacher, accepted defeat with toic philosophy and shot and killed himself here last night.

The final chapter of his long and brilliant career with written with an artistry as consummate as any displayed in the tragic termination of one of his novels.

Walking to the steps of his San Francisco morgue, he pulled a pistol from his pocket and, with coolness and deliberation, fired a bullet into his brain.

Two notes, one addressed to an intimate friend and the other "to whom it may concern," recounted the story of his long battle with the disease of the kidneys, his physical exhaustion and mental turmoil and his eventual surrender to death.

"I have been broken on the wheel of the soul's effort to express myself," said one of the notes which was found beside the body. "Nothing remains but to dynamite the ruins."

Samuel Alden, a special policeman, was the sole witness of th edramatic act which terminated the career of the noted author.

"Mr. MacFarlane stopped at the entrance to the coroner's office and hung his walking stick over his arm," Alden said. "I thought he was going to light a cigarette in the shelter of the low window there but the next instant out came the pistol and he put a shot into his left temple and just slid down the wall aand crumpled to the sidewalk."

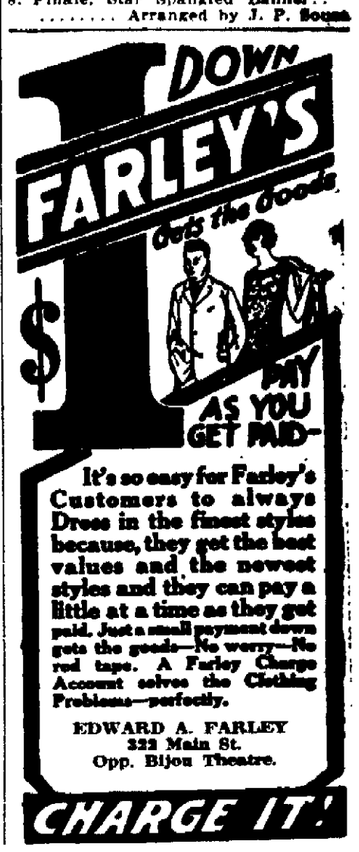

Mr. MacFarlane was 53 years old. His career reached from his first position as a railroad clerk to that of a successful author, flickering for a brief period before the footlights when he was an actor and including seven years as a pastor.

Within the past 15 years he had written many volumes of fiction and was a frequent contributor to popular publications. His best known works included: "Held To Answer," "Those Who Have Come Back," "The Quest of the Yellow Peril," "The Crack in the Bell,' and the "Hell Favers." He was a resident of Pine Dunes, California ,where he wrote the long and sombre notes which form the leading chapter of his life.

How To Make Delicious Strawberry Jam in 15 Minutes

"Looks Better, Tastes Better and Actually Costs Less than when made by Old Boiling-down Method"—Ann Proctor

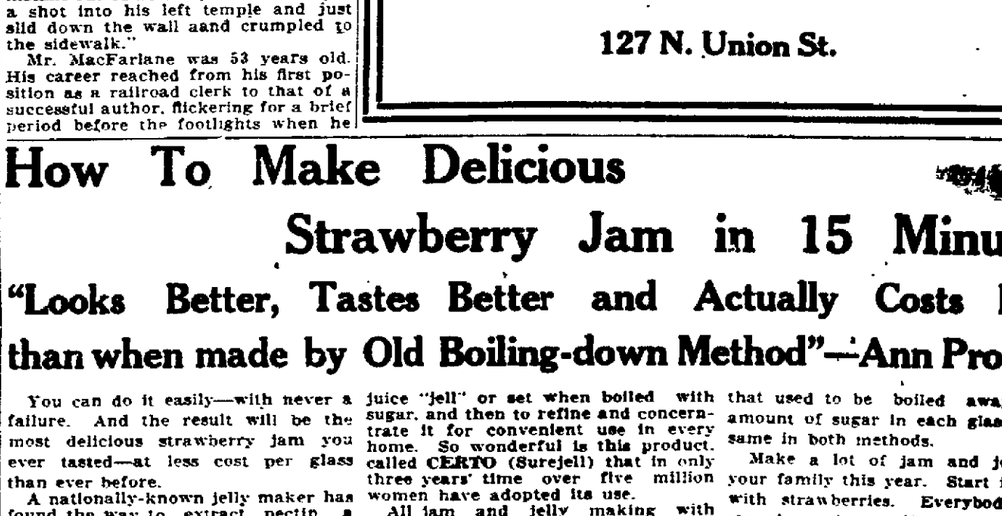

You can do it easily—with never a failure. And the result will be the most delicious strawberry jam you ever tasted—at less cost per glass than ever before.

A nationally-known jelly maker has found the way to extract pectin, a substance found in some fruits in varying amounts which makes the juice "jell" or set when boiled with sugar, and then to refine and concentrate it for convenient use in every home. So wonderful is this product, called CERTO (Surejell) that in only three years' time over five million women have adopted its use.

All jam and jelly making with CERTO is as simple as "two and two make four." Anyone who will follow a simple CERTO recipe can now make any kind of jam and jelly in a few minutes at minimum expense. No more long hours over a hot stove to boil-down your jelly—no more spoiled batches of fruit and sugar because your jelly will not "jell." Tears and disappointments, a common experience at jelly making times, are now changed to smiles and enthusiasm. The new CERTO method eliminates all the worry and all the failures, takes less work and gives superior quality.

The illustrations show how easy it is—just three simple steps. Note that you boil the fruit and juice only one minute with CERTO—not the long, boiling-down method formerly used. Jelly is therefore made of the juice that used to be boiled away. That's why CERTO makes one-half more jam or jelly with the same amount of fruit or at less expense per glass. That is also why your jam and jelly made with Certo has a superior color and flavor. More sugar is used in the CERTO method simply to make jam or jelly of the fruit and flavor that used to be boiled away. The amount of sugar in each glass is the same in both methods.

Make a lot of jam and jelly for your family this year. Start in now with strawberries. Everybody loves strawberry jam. No home ever has too much of it. As a spread on bread etc., or on ice cream, pudding, or fruit salads, nothing is more tasty. Get some fully-ripened fruit, the kind with the best flavor, and use this recipe for

STRAWBERRY JAM

Crush about 2 quarts ripe berries in separate portions, so that each berry is mashed. This allows fruit to quickly absorb the sugar during the short boil. Measure 4 level cups (2 lbs.) crushed into large kettle, add 7 level cups (3 lbs.) sugar and mix well. Use hottest fire and stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil Hard for one full minute, remove from fire and stir in 1-2 bottle (scant 1-2 cup CERTO. From time jam is taken off fire allow to stand not over 5 minutes by the clock, before pouring. In the meantime, skim, and stir occasionally to cool slightly. Then pour quickly.

Use same recipe for Raspberry, Blackberry or Dewberry Jam.

Remember CERTO is pure fruit pectin—the concentrated pectin so highly endorsed by magazine and newspaper cooking editors, government authorities and food experts CERTO contains no gelatine or preservative, and jam or jelly made with it keeps indefinitely. Any grocer will supply you with CERTO and a recipe book attached. Get some now while strawberries are plentiful. You'll be happy when you use CERTO.

Hoover's name in the vice presidential talk, those of Senators Borah and Curtis stayed well up in the verbal count and Judge W. S. Kenyon, Representative L. J. Dickinson and former Representative John W. Good, all of Iowa, were frequently mentioned. Others well—and more or less often—spoken of, included Charles H. March, of Minnesota; C. C. Chapman, of California; Charles B. Warren, of Michigan, ambassador to Mexico and chairman of the platform committee; Senator Jones, of Washington; Gov. Dixon, of Montana; Major General James G. Harbord, former deputy chief of staff of the army; Major General Frank T. Hines, director of the veterans bureau, and Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana.

Much comment, reminiscent and otherwise was aroused by the omission of the name of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge from the caucus slate of the Massachusetts delegation. This, it was pointed out, either in strictly historical vein or with significant undertone, was the first time such a thing had happened in a generation.

Fifteen minutes before the time set for the convention to come to order the hall was filling rapidly.

The band located up at one corner of the stage behind the seats reserved for the national committee blared out an air now and then which mixed with the hu-m of the arriving delegates and visitors. There were some great empty spaces in the banks of seats in the enormous galleries.

When the band rested the great hundred thousands dollar pipe organ with its ten thousand pipes burst out in melody and filled the great hall with the resonance of the chords of a stirring air suggesting assembly.

There was a colorful accompaniment to the organ music as the lighting apparatus was turned on and the hall was flooded with various shades of light. At times it was a dark purple light that flooded the great assembly and then it changed to a burst of light resembling the rising of the sun.

Temporary Chairman Burton visited the platform and conferred briefly with Chairman Adams of the National committee. Other dignitaries, some of them old and some if them new, came to their places. Great oil paintings of Lincoln, Harding and Roosevelt draped with American flags were revealed about the center of the stage backed on the folds of an enormous flag.

After one of the selections from the organ loft Colonel Thayer, sergeant-at-arms, ordered the aisles cleared and the band got ready for a parade around the hall to amuse and entertain the waitin gdelegates. It was apparent that as usual on the first day, there was to be a little delay in getting started and that the convention would not come to order promptly at 11 o'clock as was called by the program.

Secretary Mellon came in and took his seat with the Pennsylvania delegation with which he is a delegate at large. Secretary Weeks sat as usual with the mass delegation and Chairman Warren of the resolutions committee sat with his colleagues from Michigan. There was as usual a lot of handshaking among the politicians who meet every four years at the convention and talk over old times. Nobody seemed to be in any hurry to get started.

The Wisconsin delegates, twenty-nine in alal, with one vote for Coolidge and 28 for Senator LaFollette, arrived together and filled the Wisconsin section. It had finally been settled that the senator would not be placaed in nomination but that 28 delegates would vote for him from the floor.

The Vermont delegation had the place of honor on the floor immediately in front of the speaker's stand in honor of the State which was President Coolidge's birth place. Massachusetts was seated right across the aisle. The other delegations were in about the same positions as they have been heretofore.

There was a good deal of vice-presidential booming going on on the floor while the delegates were assembling.

Chairman Adams, however, broke in on the disorder on the floor and called the convention to order promptly at 11 o'clock. John Phillip Sousa, the march king, from a place on the speakers' stand led the band which took places on the floor and played the Star Spangled Banner, instead of parading about as had first been planned. While the band was playing and the audience was standing at attention, the lighting effects continued and accentuated a great American flag which was dropped in front of the delegates.

The band swung into the "Stars and Stripes Forever," with Sousa leading in his well-known characteristic style.

Delegate sections on the floor had meanwhile filled up but there were still a good many empty seats in the gallery.

At the conclusion of the march Bishop Anderson offered prayer while the convention stood.

At the conclusion of the prayer the convention remained standing and sang two verses of "America."

Then the official photograph of the convention was taken.

The cameras were placed in the rear of the hall. The photographer had the job of inducing a couple of thousand delegates and alternates to turn around in their chairs. There was a good deal of painful craning of necks but after repeated admonitions to be quiet the flash light bomb went off and the picture was taken. It was a smokeless one, however.

After that the band got in again and the convention managers took the opportunity to a little more conferring. William M. Butler, the new political general, took a place at the platform rail and calmly and carefully looked over the assemblage. He had the air of a general looking over his troops. The band played "Auld Lang Syne" and the old timers looked as if they appreciated it.

Secretary Lockwood of the national committee got the first applause of the convention, when he stepped forward to read the official call for the convention.

While he was reading, the motion picture men got into action and the platform was flooded with bright light.

During the reading, former Gov. Groesbeck, of Michigan, sent word to Chairman Adams that he did not wish to serve on the platform committee and asked that A. T. Roberts be placed there instead.

Chairman Adams then addressed the convention saying:

"This is the eighteenth Republican national convention.

"It is only sixty years since Lincoln was president. In that brief period our country has enjoyed the greatest moral and material advancement in all history.

"This has been brought about largely under Republican rule. And at no time have the problems of government been more wisely and effectively met than during the last three years.

"Our party has always stood for constructive progress. It has always endeavored to promote the welfare of the average man.

It has always adhered to America's best traditions, both in domestic and in foreign affairs.

"Today Europe is torn by class cleavage and hatred which threatens every social order. America alone, in the great family of natoins is united and stable, prosperous and free and at peace with all the world.

"We are here now to pledge a-new our faith in American institutions and to name the next president and vice president of the United States."

Chairman Adams made a picturesque figure with his shock of snow white hair.

There was applause when the chairman referred to Lincoln and more applause when he referred to the preservation of American institutions.

Mr. Adams then proposed Representative Burton of Ohio for temporary chairman amid a burst of applause led by the Ohio delegation and visitors. He appointed Senator Norbeck of South Dakota, A. T. Roberts, of Michigan and Annie S. Carlisle of Indiana, to bring the chairman to the platform. Senator Norbeck was not in the hall and the chairman of the South Dakota delegation acted in his place.

In the hurry and modesty of getting it over with Chairman Adams forgot to put a vote to the venvention on the selection of Mr. Burton until after he had appointed the committee to escort him to the chair. Smilingly Mr. Adams returned to the front of the platform and 'put the vote which was carried with a rolling chorus of ayes and much laughter at the chairman's oversight of one of the technicalities of procedure.

Chairman Burton moved about a bit during his delivery and at some times got away from the microphone which was carrying out by radio to many millions of listeners the proceedings of the convention. If anybody missed some of the speech, it probably was not static.

There was applause when the chairman referred to the participation of women in the convention, but it seemed to come principally from the women.

As Mr. Burton proceeded alternately reading from his manuscript, and then speaking extemporaneously at a rate which indicated that it would take him probably an hour and a half or a little less, applause punctuated his remarks. There was one burst when the chairman said it was to be regretted that the President was not given time to take up the matter of Japanese exclusion by diplomatic negotiation before the exclusion act was passed.

The first prolonged cheering and applause came when chairman declared "the Republican party stands now as always for law enfodcement."

Another burst of applause followed the chairman's reference to an anti-lynching law.

Mr. Burton drew more applause in ris remarks concerning conservation of national resources. He did not mention Muscle Shoals nor Henry Ford by name, but he said "no hundred year franchises should be given." The delegates got the point and applauded.

There was more prolonged applause and cheering when the chairman, referring to the recent congressional investigations at Washington, condemned in strong terms character assassins, rumor mongers and the like.

Guilt, he said, should be punished and it was important that the innocent should be protected. He disclaimed any restriction on any investigator seeking to expose crime of dereliction in good faith. His declaration that the Republican party stood firm "as a rock" for punishment of the guilty regardless of party brought more applause.

There were more cheers for the chairman's declaration for party solidarity and his call for a Republican Congress" made up of members tried and true who will stand united. That brought out the first real demonstration of the session. Delegates rose to their feet cheering and waving hats and handkerchiefs. Many of them, turned to the Wisconsin delegation, where the LaFollette delegates remained silent without taking part in the demonstration. There were cries "stand up Wisconsin," and one delegate stood up. The demonstration subsided when Mr. Burton went ahead with his speech.

The first mention of President Coolidge's name brought out a new demonstration which approached the fervor of the previous one. Speaker Gillettee, of Massachusetts sprang to his feet and Senator Lodge rose beside him.

The demonstration subsided in a moment, but was renewed when the chairman declared "the people have confidence in Calvin Coolidge" and his further statement that "others may have lost their nerve; Calvin Coolidge has not lost his."

Chairman Burton finished just after one o'clock, having spoken an hour and a half and the convention responded with a demonstration of applause and prolonged cheers to his prediction of party victory in November.

The applause over, Chairman Burton took up the further business of perfecting the temporary organization. Chairman Adams of the national committee introduced Secretary 'Lafe' Gleason, of New York, who presented the roll of temporary officers for the convention. They were approved.

RUPERT HUGHES RAPS WOMEN IN SPEECH TO CLUB

By FORREST WHITE
(Copyright, 1924, by The Bee)

LOS ANGELES, June 10.— Bobbed hair, cigarette smoking, bathing girl revues and censorship of the movies are all under the lid upon which the resolutions committee of the general Federation of Women's clubs is resolutely sitting, determined that they shall not pop out to plague the biennial convention last week.

But this is Los Angeles, the city of the bobbed hair, cigarette smoking womeff, censored movies, and bathing girls who startle on and off the films, and nobody can tell what will happen a day before it does. Just to prove it, despite their well laid plans, somebody let Rupert Hughes in on the proceedings of the biennial, and the ladies of the convention had the unique experience of hearing themselves panned to a fare you well to their very faces by the novelist and maker of motion pictures. They could not have been more surprised or shocked if he had bit them all on the ankle. Rupert was sure savage.

Now the question is, who let Rupert in? and there is no answer. He just happened. And so it may be with bobbed hair, cigarette smoking and bathing girls, or some other equally jazy subject but not if the resolutions committee knows itself.

From the first arrivals, the delegates to the convention have been plagued with questions of what they were going to do about bobbed hair, cigarette smoking, nudity and daring handling of sex questions in motion pictures, and kindred questions arising out of the age of Jazz. The delegates have responded almost to a woman that they were not going to do a thing about them.

"We feel that any resolution against bobbed hair, would be an insult to the many club women who wear their hair that way."

The chairman of one delegation was reported as ready to stir up a bobbed hair discussion,, and without saying so, the same attitude is held toward cigarette smoking. It has been persistently reported that Mrs. Clyaton D. Lee, president of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's clubs, will insist upon a resolution debarring bathing girl revues, beauty contests and all similar exploitations of pulchritude." Mrs. Lee stating that the "immodest display of physical charms by oung girls is creating a false standard of values," and "in beauty contests their curves, their firmness, their suppleness, all are passed on by male judges,' and that the girls must submit to being handled by these men. But it is now doubtful if the matter ever will be brought to the attention of the convention.

It was also thought that the censorship of the movies would not come up for discussion at the biennial, but Rupert Hughes, a mere male, blasted such plans when he arose to speak to a large gathering of the delegates and the storm over his remarks is still raging: Rupert enjoys the commotion. Its water on his wheel. Incomementing on beauty shows and bathing suits, he declared that the immodest woman is the woman who wears stockings at the beach, thereby advertising self consciousness, which he characterized as only another name for immodesty.

"Women have as much right to show their architecture as men." Mr. Hughes told the club women, looking about him with a fleeting smile.

"Any woman who wants to be a censor is not decent enough to be one You club women and old maids of the male sex are forcing censorship. Get old fashioned brooms, sweep out the dirt and filth of your homes and make them more liveable for the family. Motion pictures have as much right to nudity as any other art. Women had better devote themselves to tearing leaves out of the statute books and make amends for the many liberty and freedom limiting statutes they were responsible for."

These and many other things did Rupert say. No wonder they are trying to find out who let him in.

LETTER FROM SALLY ATHERTON TO BEATRICE GRIMSHAW

MY DEAR BEE:

I laughed and I almost cried over your letter. Indeed, I think I would have let a few tears drop from my suffused eyes if I hadn't promised myself that I would never shed a tear for anyone or anybody again.

It's rather a sad time of life for a woman when she gets to that point in her career where she feels that no one is worth a tear, not even herself.

I think you were right, Bee, when you said to Dick Summers that you were not going to let him put you in a position where he could hurt you again as much as he had already done. The arrogance of that young man rather appeals to me, however. The idea of his telling you—of confessing to you—that you are not the woman who can give him any thrills, and by this implying that probably in his future life there may come again those who, like Paula Perier, will be able to set his nerves in an emotional tingle.

He evidently expects you, because you love him, to take him back into your soft, tender arms when he has been hurt, or sated, and bind up his bruised heart and make it all well again. Then he can go out upon a new foray among the thrillers. But in this, Bee, I don't know that he is any different from any other man. Mr. John Alden Prescott has been left alone by his charming wife for a couple of weeks. Now John Alden thinks that as a husband he is a man above reproach, and yet I know that if it were any other woman than I who were here in the office with him day after day John Alden would be riding for a fall, and he would experience that fall very soon.

Honestly, Bee, if it were not for Leslie, I think I would show him that he is weakest when he thinks he is strongest.

He was telling me yesterday of a friend of his, a Mr. Sydney Carton. Did you ever meet him? From what John Alden says this chap must be a real paragon, and also from what he says I sensed that Sydney is probably very much in love with John Alden's wife. John Aldedn, in his ignorance and arrogance, has not the slightest inkling of the matter!

Do not mistake me, dear. I haven't the slightest idea that Leslie is aware of the deep devotion with which her husband's friend's heart is filled. In fact, one of the reasons why I think this Carton chap is in love with Leslie is because he has made some excuse to keep away from her; he has only visited them once since their marriage. But oh, you would laugh, my dear, if you could realize what an eye he is keeping on friend husband, insisting that he shall do his duty as a husband and a gentleman!

This Sydney Carton is coming over here next week when Leslie returns from New York where she is visiting with her family, who have just returned from Europe, you know.

I think I'll break over my resolution and visit Leslie during that time. It will be an amusing experience to see husband and friend together and unconscious wife sitting between.

Brilliant Address On Freemasonry

One of the largest gatherings of the Masonic fraternity in this city in recent years attended the stated communication of Roman Eagle lodge, No. 132, A. F. & A. M. in the Masonic Temple last night, the especial attraction being an address by Dr. Hubert McNeill Poteat, a professor in Wake Forest College, N. C., a past Grand Master of Masons in that state and a leader in the education life of North Carolina. Probably 150 members of the craft gathered to meet and hear this distinguished and scholarly member of the craft and to hear his message, and it is no exaggeration to state that all who head him were enthusiatsic over his presentation of the opportunities, obligations and large possibilities of a loyal and faithful Masonic organization in stimulating public morality, true religion, clean and strong manhood and better government and citizenship.

After the usual routine of a stated communication had been disposed of, Right Worshipful Ben W. Beach, deputy grand master of the Grand lodge of Virginia, introduced Right Worshipful Hubert M. Poteat, with a graceful appreciation of the man and scholar and a commendation of his Masonic career. Dr. Poteat is said to be the best ritualist in North Carolina and holds high rank as a brilliant speaker and writer of chaste and beautiful English. He spoke from manuscript last night and was able to present his ideas none the less eloquently by reason of the fact that his words were polished rhetorical and beautiful.

Taking the gist of a passage of Scripture as the theme of his address, he defined Masonic obligations and the beneficent effects of fidelity to them by men of the craft in their daily lives and associations. He pointed out the unrealized possibilities of active and faithful adherence to Masonic ideas and tenets and exhorted his hearers to a large appreciation of the importance and the value and potentialities of Freemasonry. He characterized Masonry as a patriotic order and one which inculcated love of country and faithful service to it. Masonry is opposed to everything un-American, he said, and he elaborated this fundamental attitude of the order, emphasized the breadth and tolerance of Masonic teachings, its stand for morality in the life of the individual and the country. In its adherence to the great commandment, "That ye love one another," its greatest attribute and its largest possibilities were to be found. It stood for education, he pointed out, was opposed to everything narrow or sectarian and for the development of men in bodies, minds and morals. It had never been offered as a substitute for religion, but was entirely compatible and was supplementary to the teachings of true religion. In summing up, he declared that Masonry stood for the support of the home and the family relation, for the maintenance of the schools and for free public education without sectarian bias, for the country in its inculcation of the paramount obligation of loyalty and patriotism.

Much of the address relating to Freemasonry was intended for the ears of the members of the order, but it was calculated to ceatre a larger and a more vivid conceptions of the obligations resting upon all who were received within the guarded portals of this ancient and honorable order. The speaker was the recipiant of many congratulations and commendations from his hearers.

MAXIM GORKY SEEKS ITALY FOR HEALTH AND QUIET

PRAGUE, June 9.—Maxim Gorky, perhaps the foremost Russian man of letters living, has forsaken Czechoslovakia for Italy in his search for health and suitable literary surroundings.

For the past two years Gorky has led a nomadic life in this quest. Last spring he settled in the Black Forest near Freiburg where for a while he found all he sought. But the unrest of October and November which culminated in the Hitler affair jolted him out of his retreat. "I've seen one breakdown in Russia," he said to his friends, "and do not care to witness another."

Gorky did not find the climate of Czechoslovakia agreeable and once more he got ready to move. This time his radicalism stood in his way, for the Mussolini government declined to give the doughty revolutionist a passport visa. After several months of correspondence, however, the permission to enter Italy was finally obtained.

During the Russian revolution Gorky at first worked with the Bolsheviks in the commissariat of education, where he mapped out a comprehensive scheme for supplying the Russian people with the best in the world's literature. Cheap popular editions of translated works of the best writers of every country, including even Turkey, were to be supplied, and several hundred volumes were published under Gorky's personal editorial supervision.

A pacifist by conviction, and a champion of the intelligentsia by instinct and temperament, he gradually became weaned from Bolshevism because of its insistence upon force and its contempt for the intelligentsia. He has therefore withdrawn from all political activity and maintains a strict neutrality toward communism, declining to be interviewed on any political subject.

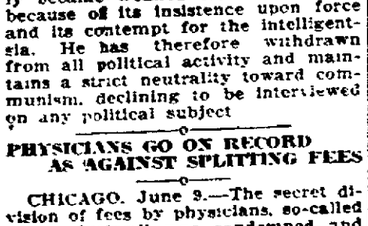

PHYSICIANS GO ON RECORD AS AGAINST SPLITTING FEES

CHICAGO, June 9.—The secret division of fees by physicians, so-called "fee splitting," was condemned and recommendations made for the use of county societies in checking the practice, in the report of the judicial council of the American Medical Association, given today at the organization's convention.

Secretary Olin West reported more than 90,000 member physicians, 55,000 of whom are Fellows. He urged the carrying of post-graduate practical medical education to the individual member of the county medical society by the central organization. It also was brought out that today there is one physician for every 724 people in the United States.

The council on medical education and hospitals indicated that the number of medical schools in the United States now represents a normal supply and is sufficient to meet the demand for physicians.

"There are now 6,830 hospitals in the United States, 940 of which use interns," the council declares. "Only 660 of these 940 hospitals using interns have been approved by the council as proper for giving intern training. Many hospitals complain of a shortage of interns, and attempts are being made by the council to meet the shortage by lengthening the term of the internship, and by securing more equitable distribution."

PRETTIEST SENIOR

This young lady has been voted the most beautiful senior at the University of Michigan. Her name is Isabel Waterworth. She lives in Detroit.

Her Sudden Death Points to Crime

Victoria Williams, a widowed colored woman, who had been residing in Philadelphia for some time, but recently returned to Danville, died suddenly about 6 o'clock last evening at the home of Mary Johnson, on Spring street where she was boarding and lodging. Her sudden death so closely followed an altercation she had with her sister, Luella Garland, in which the latter struck her on the head with a piece of billiard cue, that it appears to have been taken for granted by many that this blow caused her death. It appears that after arriving there, collapsed and died quickly, almost instantaneously.

Body Examined.

The city coroner, Dr. J. E. Taylor, was promptly notified and he in turn informed the police. Dr. Taylor went to the scene, saw the dead body and made a cursory examination and gathered such evidence as he could with a view to ascertaining the precise cause of death. At his direction, Tony McCain and Luella Garland are being held in custody as material witnesses until the precise cause of death has been determined. In order to determine this, an autopsy will be made. An inquisition will be held at the courthouse tomorrow (Wednesday) at 11 A. M. In the meantime, the body was removed to U. S. Cunningham's undertaking establishment.

It appears that the woman now dead had stored certain furniture with her sister, Luella Garland, when the Williams woman removed to Philadelphia. Since her return she had been rooming and boarding with Mary Johnson. In the morning it is said Victoria went to a second-hand furniture buyer with a view to disposing of her goods which had been stored. It seems that Tony McCain, a boarder at Luella Garland's heard of the prospective sale and promptly sought out and informed Luella, and, in fact, quarreled much of the. Thereupon the two sisters had words afternoon. This quarrel eventuated in the violence on the part of Luella which is suspected to have caused the Williams woman's death.

Police officers have been gathering all available testimony and have taken into custody and ordered the man, McCain, and Garland woman detained pending the result of the autopsy and inquisition the coroner proposes to have made.

MUSCLE SHOALS PROJECT DATES BACK 100 YEARS

SHEFFIELD, Ala., June 9.—While the development of Muscle Shoals is but a recent project in the minds of most people of the United States, the history of intent to develop this vast potential power dates back a century, according to records under observation here.

The first act of Congress with reference to the Shoals was passed when Congress gave its consent to the operation of an act passed by the Alabama legislature on December 30, 1823, to improve navigation in the Coosa river, in the center of the state, and to aid in connecting it with the Tennessee river in the north.

The company formed under these acts by Congress and the legislature was unable to sell its stock and on May 23, 1828, Congress passed another act ceding 200,000 acres of land in north Alabama to the state so the shoals could be improved.

An amendment to this latter act passed June 23, 1836, permitted the state to sell this land for less than $1.50 per acre, which was the minimum price then allowed by federal statutes. It is said some of the land sold for as low as 25 cents an acre.

The total cost of navigation facilities to 1890 was $2,101,726.50 and up to 1915 for operation and care was $1,496,372.30, making a total of $4,598,098.80 on Muscle Shoals for navigation alone.

Thompson Keeps Boyhood Punch

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Back in the '90's Huston Thompson was the champion prizefighter in his class at Princeton.

Today, the same Huston Thompson, now chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, still has the ol' punch.

He's intensely interested in any outdoor recreation you name and is a peppy individual even when plugging away at his desk.

Thompson rises at 6 a. m. and eats a light breakfast.

Then he's off on a three-mile hike to his office. Walking, he says, has kept him in fine athletic trim—and he looks the part.

The morning hours are spent at his desk and at noontime he walks to some eat shop a mile or so in town, or, if too busy, sends out to a nearby cafeteria for a sandwich.

The afternoon, until around 5, is given over to more bushiness, and then there's a snappy walk homeward. Then he and his 14-year-old daughter go out for a set or two of tennis.

Thompson is a golf enthusiast, but finds little time for it these days. Hence tennis is his real outdoor hobby.

In the evenig he turns to a good book or dabbles with his radio. At least onec or twice a week the Thompson family take in a movie or a show. Good plays have a strong appeal with the Trade Commission chairman.

It isn't strange that Thompson smacks his lips over flapjacks and corn cakes. He got the habit on coming trips back home in the mountains of Colorado.

MARX CABINET GETS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

By SIGRID SCHULTS
(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

BERLIN, June 7.—The Marx cabinet and its program, providing for full acceptance of the Dawes reparation report, received a vote of confidence today, 247 against 183.

Only after Foreign Minister Stresemann had thrown the full weight of his personality and fighting spirit into the long winded debate did the Reichstag finally vote on the government program.

Clenching his fists, ready to fight anybody who opposed him, Herr Stresemann in a two hour speech outlined his program and the German interpretation of the Dawes report, interrupting himself only to deal a verbal blow to dispense the stinging sarcasm of the bitter, howling opponents in the ranks of the supernationalists or communists.

"The Dawes report is a modern economic Bible, in the eyes of public opinion throughout the world," was the term coined by Germany's foreign minister, who continued.

"The American experts played an important part in formulating the Dawes report. All the international experts who worked on the report had been finding a practical solution.

"It was fatal to the whole of Europe for years that after the war America coined the words 'Hands off' because the United States are honest arbitrators par excellence for Europe. They are too rich to b threatened into weakening Germany. Far away over the sea they see th matter in its proper light.

"The point is the spirit in which the Dawes suggestions will be carried out and interpreted. We want to interpret them fairly, and expect others to do so too.

"The problem closest to the hearts of the Germans is the fate of political prisoners in the occupied zone, and thousands who were deported from their homes in the occupied zones. We have been negotiating with the allied governments in these matters, and hope for a settlmnt.

"Th question of military evacuation of the Ruhr by the French troops is mainly a question of prestige. The experts' report mentions the military evacuation, but provides that the organizations which are to control the Ruhr can only be mentioned in a separate report.

"An agreement must be reached between Germany and France about a full possible evacuation. The occupation reduces Germany's paying capacity even in the eyes of the Dawes report, and we are sure an understanding can be reached. One reason we believe this is the fact that M. Herriot's position will be strong in France when he becomes premier. We can not guarantee a sensible solution of the policy in the Ruhr unless we can control the administration there."

SAN JUAN IS TO SEND CONTESTING DELEGATES TO CLEVELAND

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 9.—One result of the decision of the Unionist and Republican parties to merge under the name of the Porto Rican Alliance, effected recently at conventions of the two parties held at Mayaguez and San German, will be that contesting delegates will be sent to the Republican national convention at Cleveland.

The merger brought about an expected split in the Republican party, which is affiliated with the national organization, the vote being 135 for entering the alliance and 55 against. Robert H. Todd, Republican national committeeman for Porto Rico, was opposed to the merger and with others today is actively at work on the development of a Pure Republican party.

The Pure Republicans have named Todd and former Governor E. Mont Reily delegates to the national convention. At Cleveland they will be opposed by delegates selected by the Republicans who have brought about the merger with the Unionists.

Erasmus A. Wiles Heeds Last Roll

A tragic sequel of the great reunion of United Confederate veterans at Memphis, Tenn., last week was the sudden death of one of the veterans who attended that rally of the once numerous gray-clad hosts, but who has with startling swiftness and sudden gone to join the great reunion—to "rest under the shade of the trees" with Lee, Jackson, the Johnstons, Stuart, Pickett, Longstreet, the two Hills and all the other great captains.

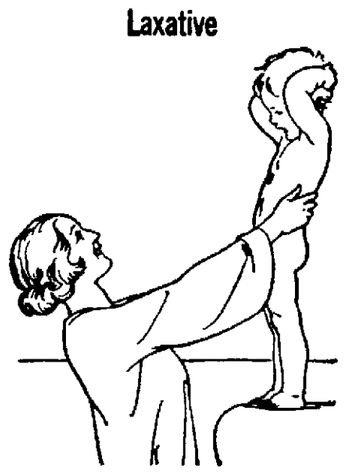

Erasmus A. Wiles, a gallant soldier of the Army of Northern Virginia, one of Pickett's immortals, returned from Memphis to his home in the Rock Springs vicinity, near Ringgold, Sunday and died there suddenly yesterday. He was 79 years old, had long been a farmer in this county and was widely known and equally esteemed in the county and in this city. His end came without warning, but at his advanced age and after the fatigue of travel and the excitement incident to the meeting with his old comrades and the strain upon physique and nerves, such a death can hardly be regarded as unexpected.

Mr. Wiles is survived by his wife, who was Miss Sallie Dodson and by three children—Mrs. J. T. Rowe, of Baltimore, and [illegible] Lester and Felix Wiles, both of Pittsylvania county. He and his wife are both widely and prominently connected in county and city.

LATITUDE IN CONTROL OF YOUTH

The two boys, Leopold and Loeb, rich men's sons held in Chicago on a charge of atrocious murder, spent their adolescent days reading and discussing the dirt of life.

They read and discussed the same things—things bearing on degenerate impulses, and the like—that too many boys and girls are discussing now, in school and college. You can't touch dirt without getting soiled. It is an old truism that is forgotten by a lot of people, nowadays. Soft mothers and indligent fathers let their sons and daughters read Freudian literature, trash about the uglier phases of sex, and say: "Our children are so much more advanced than we were!"

It is a cold fact that truck of that sort is under constant discussion between young men and young women in their later teens and earliest twenties, in nearly every "intellectual" circle in the land. One of the first signs of it is a sort of weariness of outlook; a disillusioned attitude that is a wretched thing among the young. They are children, after all. They are in search of the thrills of life, as the young of every species is. But when the thrills that come with the discovery of new and horrible facts, have vanished, there still remains the desire for new thrills. Leopold and Loeb found the new thrill. They found it, they say, in murder, and they are just boys, boys from good homes.

They had touched dirt, as thousands of others of our young are touching it, and they are stained—blood red!

RUSSIA'S FREED SPIRIT

Now the council of trade unions at Moscow has initiated a project to alter the calendar. Each year would consist of 360 days, divided into 12 months of 30 days each. Each week would be of five days, only four of which would be work-days. The day would consist of 25 hours and the hour of 57 minutes. Each month would consist of six weeks. Some time ago the name of Petrograd, which had been changed from St. Petersburg, was changed again to Leningrad. The name Russia itself may pass out of existence. The soviet authorities declare that the official name of the country is Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, abbreviated to "Usser." Everything about Russia in the past few years has been change, change, change.

Of course the subject is a complicated one and not to be explained offhand. But the extraordinary activity of the spirit of change in Russia of late would seem to be natural enough under the circumstances. For a long time the spirit of Russia was largely imprisoned or shackled by autocracy. Freed at last it finds expression in changing things as far as possible.

In such matter as civilization kept from growing stale. It is one the Russian people will find themselves and settle down under a form of government that may indeed contain some ideas of world value.

THE PRICE WE PAT

No matter what we get in life, we pay for it. Nature never gives something for nothing. Wherever we acquire anything we lose an equivalent something.

Take the family that was poor until the war came and made them rich. Their wealth has brought wonderful things into their lives. But they have lost things that cannot be measured in dollars—including association with intimate friends of the old days and the joys of simple pleasures.

Maybe they are happier than they were back in the days when a dollar looked as big as a wagon wheel. If so, they are being rewarded fir enduring past misery.

The law of compensation—cause and effect—always balances the scales in the long run. The weights that balanne the slales are not always visible to outsiders. But it takes a lot of ill-gotten gains to rompensate for remorse, shame of an uneasy conscience.

Possibly shame, even conscience, is lacking in some hearts during life. But no one knows what thoughts and feelings are at the instant of death. Nor the price that is collected beyond the grave from people who dodge payment in this life.

Most of the discomforts and reputed loneliness of bachelor life vanish when we marry. But we soon find that we have acquired new burdens and worries.

Observe the mother, slave to her baby. She is paying for the maternal joy that has come into her life.

Ponder the man who flees from the congestion, and irritation of the city. In the wilderness or on a farm he has freedom, elbow-room, fresh air, peace. And he pays the price by not having the conveniences and excitement of the metropolis.

Even knowledge has its price—intense study and surrender of time that might be spent in pleasure.

We pay in full. When we get a thing we lose its equivalent. At the end of the road, old and successful, we look back and would trade it all for youth. Something for nothing? Never.

SYNOPSIS

Peter Newhall, Augusta, Ga., flees to Alaska, after being told by Ivan Ishmin, Russian violinist, he had drowned Paul Sarichef, Ishmin's secretary, following a quarrel. Ishmin and Peter's wife, Dorothy, haad urged him to flee to South America. He joins Big Chris Larson in response to a distress signal at sea, forcing his sea jacket upon him. Their launch hits rocks.

Dorothy receives word that her husband's body, identified by his sea jacket, has been buried in Alaska. She feels free to receive Ishmin's attentions. But Peter had been rescued. Injuries completely change his appearance. Larson's body occupies the grave.

Ishmin and Dorothy go to Alaska to carry Peter's body back to Georgia. They do not recognize Peter, who is chosen head guide. A storm carries their ship to sea, stranding them at the grave. Next day, Peter proposes a hunting party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

But the musician, sprawled on his moss-bed and reading a pocket-size novel in the original French, did not take so kindly to the suggestion.

"Not me today, Dorothy," he protested. "There'll be no pleasure for me in tramping over that howling tundra. The wind's still sharp enough so that I want a fire and appreciate even such a lowly shelter as this. Wait till a nice day and I'll go gladly."

The girl turned in some disappointment to Pete. "I guess that ends it," she told him.

The guide straightened, encouraged by her tone. "Yes—unless—unless you'd care to go with me alone." She thought she saw a very curious, urgent appeal in his blue eyes. "I wouldn't take you very far."

He waited, hardly breathing for her answer. She turned questioningly to Ivan. The latter smiled dimly and nodded his head. "I don't see why you shouldn't, if you want to," he told her.

Yet an uneasy thought darkened his face, and he turned sharply to Pete.

"How far do you intend to go?"

"Not any farther than Mrs. Newhall desires," was the answer, given with some spirit. "I'm inclined to think we can pick up a caribou within a mile."

"You'll be pretty lucky if you can. It's not that there isn't plenty of game—Bradford told me that—but the country is enormous. Don't go more than two miles at the most—we might want to leave here in a hurry and don't want to wait for you. Go ahead, Dorothy, if you like. If you want to be a huntsman bold. I don't see why you shouldn't."

"Then would you mind lending Mrs. Newhall your pistol?" Pete asked. "She might want to take a shot at a ptarmigan, and this bear gun of mine wouldn't leave much bird."

He spoke quietly casually, but Dorothy did not misunderstand. At the same instant she realized that this tall, rugged man of the open possessed those certain good manners, that unobtrusive consideration for others, that is the ideal of good breeding. He made this request not to furnish Dorothy an arm with which to shoot ptarmigan. Both she and Ivan understood this in an instant. He wanted to save her any uneasiness when she was alone with him, in the wilds, simply to give her a deadly weapon with which she could protect, in direst need, her own integrity.

The two started away very happily together. Pete's blue eyes danced; the girl was flushed and eager, lent [illegible] He took her up the slow hill they had climbed the previous day, then down into the alder-grown valley beyond.

Almost at once they began to see the wild life that redeems even such barren, desolate lands as this. Ptarmigan flushed up, and instantly Dorothy recognized them as the most graceful creatures she had ever seen on wings.

"Would you like to try a crack at 'em?" Pete asked. "They'd go migty well for lunch."

But Dorothy had no killing instinct, and she shook her head. "They're too pretty. Of course we'll get some if we can't find any big game."

He led her through a break in the alders; and here they both halted to watch a huge, snowshoe hare. It was a droll thing to see this creature stand erect in the grass in an effort to see plainly out of his weak eyes and to distinguish the nature of these tall, strange forms suc has he had never laid eyes on before. He walked back and forth on his hind legs, stretched to his full height. Then, remembering safety first—even at the expense of his inordinate curiosityh—he sped away.

They sped on up the next hill and down into the farther valley and to the bank of a small, swiftly flowing stream. There were signs in plenty here of the wild life that thronged the region. She saw tracks not only of fox and caribou, but a wolverine had trotted along that way in the dawn; an otter had romped on the muddy bank; and, at a crossing, she encountered a huge, almost triangular imprint that might have been the track of some legendary man-eater of bygone ages.

The track was fully twelve inches long, and sharp claws had cut deeply into the sand. "Nothing more or less than the great Kodiak bear," Pete explained. "Maybe you don't know it, but this is just about the last place in the world where the big Kodiak—whose hide is sometimes 11 feet long—can still be found in any numbers. Can't you fancy the old warrior—booming along here looking for salmon?" But he was quick to explain that even these huge beasts would run from human beings a thousand times where once they would stand and fight, that, unlike the Alaskan brown bears of farther east and the grizzlies of the mountains, they were practically never known to make an unprovoked attack.

Thence they followed the stream clear up into the higher hills. Dorothy was active and athletic, yet she had to stop every few minutes for breath.

"How far do you want to go?" she asked him in one of these rests.

"I hoped to go quite a little farther. We're not more than a mile from camp, and two miles is our limit. I'd rather hoped we could reach the top of the ridge. Do you want to turn back?"

She looked up at the rocky backbone of the ridge that still towered grandly above them—its imposing elevation manifest by scattered patches of last winter's snows—and then into Pete's brown face. She hated to give up when this tall guide of hers expected her to go on. She was a sportswoman at heart, and she flashed him a smile.

"We'll plug on up," she told him.

They went on, and now the stream was but a silver thread far below them in the dark gully, and the gully itself was crusted over at intervals by last year's snow. At last they stood at the very windy crest of the ridge.

Almost at once Pete pointed out some curious white spots, not to be noticed at all by a casual glance, in one of the adjacent valleys. These were the caribou—the veritable children of these mossy barrens.

They did not turn to the hunt at once. Dorothy needed rest before attempting the difficult stalk at Pete's side; so she seated herself on a grand throne of rock in the gray cliff and overlooked the country. This was ever a grim, merciless land, yet it had a quality of unearthly beauty.

Far below her the wide barrens swept down to the blue sea. Behind, the ridges mounted ever higher, with a queer effect of actual procession, until at last the high, sharp, white peaks of the Aleutian Range stood flashing against the cold, gray clouds.

It would have been depressing alone; and even the companionship of this lowly guide cheered her and consoled her.

Soon after she began the long stalk toward the caribou herd, at Pete's side. They sped swiftly down into the valley, and then, taking shelter behind a thicket of alder, moved straight toward the animals. They last two hundred yards that would bring Pete into long-rifle range had to be made with laborious stealth, taking advantage of every rise in ground and walking in a tiring, stooped position.

Lying prone in the deep moss they peered over the brow of the hill. It was a very satisfying picture to Dorothy. The caribou are always beautiful animals; and the setting of the green hillside, with the heaven-reaching white peaks behind, showed them at their best. The range, however, was about three hundred yards, a distance in which kills are made often in hunters' tales but rarely in hunting.

"If I'm going to have a chance, I've got to take a rest," Pete whispered. "I'm not an extra fancy shot—would you mind crawling around in front?"

She obeyed instantly, every nerve keyed up by the excitement of the chase, and it was quite like being a mighty nimrod herself to lie prone on the moss and let Pete rest his rifle across her body.

And the wilderness gods granted him success. At the rifle's sound a young buck—a shimmering, splendid creature with horns branched but once—fell stone dead in the moss.

The reindeer leaped, milled an instant, then swept off through the valley. The two hunters climbed down, and a few seconds late Pete drew the keen blade of his hunting knife across the shaggy throat of th efallen animal. The carcass was then drawn, the trim feet interlocked, and Pete lifted the entire one hundred pounds on his broad back.

There was one further, minor adventure to that first day in the wilds—but not at all concerned with rifles and death. They reached the bank of a narrow, swift stream; and Pete, who walked in front, came to an abrupt halt.

He turned to her with no distinguishable expression on his bronzed face, and she stared back in return. "We've really got to get across this creek," he told her. "And it's too deep for your waterproof boots. How do you think we can manage it?"

"I'm sure I don't know." The girl had a faint smile. "It's too bad you don't feel yourself capable of carrying me over."

He plunged immediately into the stream, laid his venison on the opposite bank, then came tramping back. He picked her up seemingly without effort.

The rushing waters evidently taxed his strength greater than she had guessed, for his sun-brown face looked somewhat drawn and pale when he put her down.

A Tale of Two Countries.

"Walking on soft carpets and rugs causes the feet to ache. The burning and aching which comes from standing on carpeted floors exceeds that due to standing on cement floors." These statements, made by Dr. A. B. Emmons, I am sure we find it difficult to understand. He investigated the foot comfort of women employed in department stores.

But he is not altogether opposed to carpets. They catch the dust and hold it. In those carpeted rooms where cleasing of the floor covering is done by vacuum cleaners, there is but little floor dust in the air. Of course, ordinary sweeping fills the air with dust.

Uncovered stone or cement floors are noisy, cold, and free from resiliency. They are apt to be slippery. The high accident rate due to slipping on loose rugs, wet stone and cement floors causes no small item of loss in a large establishment with many employes.

Wooden floors are excellent. They are springy and easy on the feet. Some kinds of wooden floors do not clean easily and tend to form dirt catching cracks. Oiling makes the floor cleaner, but it increases the danger from slipping. Linoleum and rubber compounds make admirable floor covering from every standpoint.

Ninety-seven women chosen because they were supposed to enjoy foot comfort, were asked whether they had any foot troubles. It was found that 53 suffered with their feet; 43 wore shoes that were too short; 40 wore heels that changed the pitch of the weight carried by the foot and caused inefficiency and discomfort; 19 wore heels so high that the pitch given the foot was wholly incompatible with efficiency and comfort; 59 of the women wore shoes that fitted badly.

These women allowed themselves to be properly fitted. At the end of a certain length of time, 74 of the number wanted to continue wearing properly fitting shoes; 59 said their feet were much more comfortable.

Emmons advocates rubber heels and rubber soles. They have more spring and they do not slip on the paving, so readily. Catching a good grip on the paving is a necessary quality where comfort and efficiency are being considered.

Aching, burning, painful, tired feet are a great source of inefficiency in working women.

Acids In Fruits.

E. B. writes:

1. I understand that rhubarb, cherries, and strawberries yield mischievous acids, whereas all the citric fruits yield beneficial ones.

2. —Also, is it well to drink milk with meals which include either acid or sub-acid fruits, or salads which contain a flavoring of vinegar?

REPLY.

1. Most fruit acids are burned by the body into carbonic acid and alkali. The lungs throw off the carbonic acid by the tissues. Rhubarb is relatively rich in oxalic acid, but cherries and strawberries are not. I do not find reference to any large quantity of any unwholesome acid in either cherries or strawberries.

2. Yes

Inflamed Appendix.

J. M. writes: The appendix:

1. Its use in the body?
2. What makes it become inflamed?
3. How may an inflamed appendix be cured without operation?
4. The seriousness of an operation if the appendix is inflamed?
5. Are you weakened any after this appendix is out?
6. Would you advise the removal of an appendix that is not inflamed now, but I have had several attacks?

REPLY.

1. None.
2. As a rule, infection with pus cocci.
3. Purging and "starvation diet" may be of some service.
4. If the case be free from complications, the death rate from operation is very low—say 2 per cent. The complications determine the death rate in great measure.
5. No.
6. Your physician is a better judge than I am.

Swollen Facial Glands.

J. J. B. writes: Am a young lady 25 years old and have swollen glands on the left side of my face beneath the cheek. There is never any pain, but this sort of disfigures the face.

1. Are they dangerous?
2. Will electric treatments dissolve them?
3. Are they caused by the condition of the blood or nerves?
4. Is a thyroid gland dangerous?

Have only been troubled with them the last three years.

REPLY.

I do not know what your trouble is unless it is tuberculosis of the lymph gland infection with tubercle bacilli. My answers are on that basis.

1. If so, there is some danger of infection of your lungs.
2. No.
3. Neither.
4. If you mean enlargement of the thyroid gland, the answer is "yes," though the degree of danger depends on the kind of goiter you have.

There is no surer sign than the campaign speeches in the course of preparation that it is going to be a hard summer.

A New Orleans man who has worked in a cemetery for 35 years says there are no ghosts. Then what is it that walks on pay day?

Money isn't everything. The man with the most costly fishing tackle catches the least fish.

Lots of people think the world owes them five or six livings.

Next to a secret the hardest thing to keep is a beautiful complexion.

A pessimist is a man who wants things different even after they are.

You can't uplift people by sitting down on them.

Health Much Better After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"Your little book left at my door was my best doctor. I read it, then said to my husband, 'Please go and get me some Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I want to take it.' The first month I took three bottles of Vegetable Compound and one of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. If you only knew how much better I feel! Now when my friends say they are sick I tell them to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I give the little book and your medicines the best of thanks."—Mrs. HAMERINK, 3765 25th Street, Detroit, Michigan.

In New York

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Democratic Mecca is putting on its best.

Sandblast experts have been at work on the outside surfaces of the handsome National Democratic Club in Madison avenue, removing a gray covering that forms on all stone buildings.

The building will be unblemished white for the arrival of delegates.

More fascinating than the palatial outer walls of the club, are its inner walls, upon which are some of the most beautiful murals in all the city.

The building, designed as the home of a New York millionaire, upon his death became the property of a daughter who sold it to the Democrats at a figure more than favorable.

Prior to the purchase of this extremely handsome building, the Democrats had sold their old club site in Fifth Avenue for a department store improvement, at a large figure. The transactions left the Democratic National Club with almost a million-dollar balance in its coffers.

At the time the arrangements committee and Chairman Cordell Hull visited Madison Square Garden several months aago, Tex Rickard boasted he could have it all ready for the big convention in one week's time.

Tex Rickard is a genius at such organization, bu the committee was taking no chances. Its men have been on the job ever since whipping their material into shape for what Tex admits is going to be one of the biggest shows ever staged in New York City. Maybe that is why Tex was glad to handle it.

To counteract any such idea of the coming convention, warnings have already been sent out by the National Committee to regard the Democratic gathering in a different light. Mr. Hull declares the convention is for a serious purpose and should not be regarded as a show.

GROCERS GIVEN ADVICE

RICHMOND, Va., June 9.—Grocers of the Piedmont, Valley and mountain districts of Virginia are urged by Commissioner of Health Hanlen G. Williams to keep in stock salt which contains a small amount of sodium iodine. The prevalance of goiter in the middle and Western portions of the State is due to insufficient of iodine in the diet of the people, health authorities are agreed. Comparatively few goiters are found in the Tidewater section because seafood contains iodine, the one sure preventive for goiter. Dr. Williams has written all grocers of the sections named requesting them to keep in stock which contains iodine.

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

MR. N. ALTROCK

Despite severe and stylish opposition from the Phillies as a team, Mr. Altrock stands out as the most comical thing in baseball kimonos.

Old Timers tell you that Booth was a knockout as a tragedian, but moderns remember that it was Chaplin, the comic, who signed the first million dollar contract.

Old Nick would look as out of place in the box today as a house apron in Peggy Joyce's suite, but he's still more important than a clue in a murder mystery.

When Altrock lost his fast one and curve he went out and developed a sense of humor that broke three ways—funny, funnier and funniest.

Nick words on the snappy theory that a dumbbell's laugh gets more circulation than an intellectual's groan.

They pay Judge Landis $42,500 a year to dignify baseball. Altrock gets a whole lot less for burlesquing it. Still you never hear little Johnny pleading with pop to take him out to see the Judge.

Nick went from pitching to clowning and there's a double-breasted sermon in that. No guy ever went from clowning to pitching—or to the boss' job.

Nick is getting more jack as a jester than he did as a star with the White Sox.....Remember that the next time you see a simpleton making goo-goo eyes at a coy squirrel.

SENSATIONAL FIELDING MARKS PATRIOTS' WIN

DURHAM, June 9.—The Bulls droped the first game of the series here with Greensboro today in a 2 to 0 shut out when Lefty Sherrill turned the home team back with six hits.

The game was scoreless for the first four innings. In the fifth Harris got on by an error. Bourg pulled the hidden ball trick and attempted to tag Harris. In the opinion of many Harris was out on the play, however, the umpire called him safe. Cox was hit by a pitched ball, the next two men flied out and, Sherrill came through with a single scoring Harris. In the seventh the Patriots added another tally. Harris led off with a triple but was caught at the plate when Cox hit through the infield. Cox scored from first from Fuhrey's double.

Brumnitt featured with a pretty stop. Jones ran around behind the colored bleachers and made a somersault catch of Brandon's foul fly. Brandon played a good game afield but it was left for Harris to furnish the real thrill when he threw Jones out at third on Allen's hit to deep right.

ERRORS GIVE WINSTON VICTORY OVER MURPHS, NEW OUTFIELDER SIGNS

Wills' Prestige as 'Heavy' Contender Is Now Diminished

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 10.—The prestige of Harry Wills as a contender for the heavyweight title is materially diminished today as a result of his failure to obtain no better than a judge's verdict over Bartley Madden, New York Irishman, with whom he fought a colorless though bloody fifteen round bout in the Queensboro A. C. Stadium, Long Island City, last night.

Wills victory was decisive enough and as clean cut as a point verdict could be, but the game Irishman took all that his massive negro opponent could send and still retained his equilibrium. Wills failure to stop Madden was one of the biggest upsets of the season, as the negro was a 3 to 1 favorite to administer to Madden his first dose of knockout medicine. Madden fought a purely defensive fight.

Round One:

Wills chased Madden into a corner twice, landing both hands to the head without a return. Madden covered cautiously but look four uppercuts to the head. Madden landed a right to the jaw. Wills punished his opponent about the body at close range. Wills used his long reach to good advantage and kept Madden backing away from his drives to the head and body, at the close of the round.

Round Two:

Wills pummeled Madden about the body as they wrestled along the ropes. Madden landed a long right to the head and then clinched. Wills battered his opponent about the ribs with powerful rights. They exchanged light blows to the head. Wills was warned for holding as they broke from a clinch. Madden was hanging on persistently to avoid Wills' sweeping right at the gong.

Round Three:

Wills wormed Madden about and resumed the more determined offensive. The big negro winked to an admirer in the crowd as he pummeled the Irishman's side. Madden landed a short right uppercut, but took four rights to the jaw in return. Madden landed a right to the head. They spent most of their time clinching. Madden's left found Wills' jaw twice. They were locked in a clinch at the end of the round.

Round Four:

Wills drove Madden to the ropes with a fierce attack to the head. Wills took a long left to the ear but complained to the refree that Madden was prolonging the clinches. Madden took a stiff jolt to hte head and absorbed more unishment at close range. Madden showed some aggressiveness and brought blood from Wills' mouth with a right hook just before the gong ended the round.

Round Five:

Madden backed away from a vicious right but was mauled about the body as they rushed together. Wills took a left hook to the head but rushed his man to the ropes with both fists swinging to the head. Wills battered Madden about the jaw and the Irishman seemed groggy. Wills missed a vicious right at the close of the round.

Round Six:

Wills drove his right to the body but Madden covered quickly. Wills rushed in quickly and sank both fists into his opponent's ribs. Madden stabbed lightly with his left to the jaw but sought the clinches frequently. Wills punished Madden about the body but Bartley ducked most of the negro's swings. Will shook Madden with an attack to the head but the Irishman stuck to his guns.

Round Seven:

Round Eight:

Madden landed his left to the head but was backed to the ropes by a straight left to the jaw. Madden's awkward style of boxing bothered the big negro who found difficulty connecting with his target. Wills missed a right and took a left to the body. Wills clubbed Madden about the head and body but was warned for holding with his left as he did so. They were sparring at the bell.

Round Nine:

Wills continued to fight a close range battle and punished Madden about the head. Madden stuck in his left twice but did not seem to harm the negro. Madden landed a smacking left to the ribs and blocked Will's counter-attack. Madden dug his left into Will's stomach and the negro missed his counter. Wills started for the wrong corner at the end of the round and seemed bewildered.

Round Ten:

Madden landed both hands to the head, but his blows lacked steam. Madden landed a glancing right to the head but was clubbed viciously by Wills in a clinch. Madden landed twice to the head and Wills backed away. The negro tried hard for an opening but the rugged Irishman blocked most of his blows. Madden's left again found Wills' jaw and the Irishman drove the negro in the ribs at the bell.

The crowd wildly cheered Madden's showing.

Round Eleven:

Madden started the round aggressively and his left found its mark twice. Wills seemed a trifle tired and was wild in his attempt to land. Madden refused to give ground and exchanged blows evenly at close quarters. Madden shot his left again to the jaw nad blocked Wills' counter offensive at the bell.

Round Twelve:

Wills punished Madden about the head as they came to grips. They were sparring cautiously with Wills doing the most damage at close range. Wills opened a nasty cut over Madden's left eye with a left hook and drove in viciously with both fists. Madden gave ground slowly and withstood a batter to the jaw. The bell rang as Wills set himself for a knockout and Madden went to his corner with blood streaming down his face.

Round Thirteen:

Wills pounded Madden viciously about the head with his right but Bartley gamely stood up and tried to fight back. Wills smashed Madden with lefts and rights but his man refused to fall. Madden jabbed with his left and clinched. Madden leaped in with a left again and Wills missed. Madden was a sorry sight from cuts about the head but fought gamely under a terrific attack. The round ended as they were sparring.

Round Fourteen:

Madden started aggressively and landed his left to head and body. Wills tried hard to gain an opening for a knockout blow, but Madden covered cleverly and blocked most of the negro's wallops. Madden sunk his right into Wills' ribs. Wills mauled his opponent in a clinch but failed to land effectively. Madden dug his left into Wills' stomach and Wills missed a left swing at the bell.

Round Fifteen:

They came together and Wills punished his opponent about the head and ribs. Madden shot his left to the body and took a jolt to the head in return. Wills smashed both hands to the head and jarred Madden with a left to the body but took a left hook to the jaw as they broke from a clinch. Madden absorbed terrific punishment at close quarters but was on his feet at the bell.

Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo light-heavyweight, who has a victory over Young Stribling to his credit gained the judge's decision over Jack Lynch of Arizona in a six round match preliminary to the Wills-Madden match.

Slattery, displaying far superior speed and punching ability outpointed Lynch in evry round and flootred his rival wiht a right hook to the jaw just before the final bell. Lynch weighed 166 and Slattery 162.

Tommy O'Brien, Milwaukee lightweight, scored a technical knockout over Pete August, of Bridgeport Conn., when the referee stopped the fight in the ninth round to save August from further punishment.

Wills apparently in fine fighting trim, received an ovation as he stepped into the ring. Three other heavyweight contenders, Ermino Spalla, European champion; Jack Renault of Canada and Floyd Johnson, of Iowa, were introduced.

Wills weighed 213 and Madden 185.

WINSTON, June 9.—Winston took an abbreviated game here this afternoon from Herb Murphy's Tobacconists 5 to 1 in five innings. A general shake up was evident from the line up. Dave Cochlin was shifted to third, Ernst was worked behind the bat, a newcomer, Ryner, played right field and Inman was at short.

In the first inning the locals got o fto a flying start and a four run lead when after two were out Waldron hit and went to second on Regan's poor throw. Standeart doubled and Waldron scored. Smith was safe on Cochlin's error. Standeart scored when Ernst threw wild to second in an effort to catch Smith. Hamby singled and the ball go taway from Trefrey and two scored. Long scored the final run for Winston in the fifth inning with none out.

In the fourth inning Resco singled but went to third when the ball got away from the outfielder. He scored the only Danville run when Ryner came through with a hit.

The game was stopped by rain in the fifth inning.

Red Sox Go Into First Place As Browns Lick Yankees

IF GIANTS OR YANKS LOSE OUT, ST. LOUIS WILL BE RESPONSIBLE

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YOR, June 10.— If either the Yankee or the Giant, flagships of Major League baseball fleets for three years, fail to return to port for the world's series in October, Gotham Fans will look to St. Louis shores for the wreckage.

On the first swing of McGraw's team through the west the Cardinals arose from an uncharted sea and shot the craft so full of holes that it wallowed into second and nearly fell to third place before encountering friendly winds at Cincinnati which carried it home in the lead.

The Browns are now engaged in visiting the same indignity upon the Yankees which the Cardinals forced upon the Giants. Yesterday the world's champions lost their third consecutive game to St. Louis as Wingard, a recruit, took his second contest of the year from the Huggins crew, 5 to 3. Ken Williams made his ninth home run of the season and Jacobs on his fifth. Sam Jones was treated roughly.

Ehmke held Chicago to four hits as Boston beat the White Sox 5 to 1 and moved into first place. Detroit advanced to within a few points of the Yankees and Rip Collins pitched a five hit game and beat the Athletics 5 to 3. Cleveland continued its winning streak and pulled another game away from the cellar with a 6 to 1 victory over Washington. Ellerbe, secured fro mthe Browns, played third base for the Indians and made two hits.

In the National the Giants gained a full game on Chicago by defeating the Pirates 6 to 4 as the Cubs lost to Brooklyn 4 to 3. Wilson, a substitute outfielder, cleaned the sacks with a three base hit off Cooper for the New York victory. Dazzy Vance fanned eleven Cubs while Kaufmann, Chicago hurler forced in the tying robin run after which Stock produced the winner with a single during a ninth inning rally.

The seventh home run of the season by Cy Williams decided a pitching duel between Luque and Mitchell in which the Phillies beat the Reds 4 to 2. Timely hitting back of Cooney's steady pitching gave Boston a 4 to 2 win over St. Louis.

Grandstand Gaff

shifted line-up with a new man in it, but that didn't seem to help any. It was Monday and as everybody knows, there's no such a thing as Danville winning a Monday game. Now that today is some other day than Monday the Tobacconists may come across and trim the Twine— maybe: Five errors lost the game, as Winston was spotted to a four run lead in the first inning, after McWhirter had retired men number one and two. An error started it and then some more errors. Mac then allowed a hit or two but how is a pitcher to continue his effectiveness with such discouraging support.

Ryner, new outfielder has been added to the roster of the Danville club. He came through with a hit at the right time yesterday and scored a run. He was only at bat twice He also handled his only chance in right.

News that there is a possibility of Murphy adding Jerry Jackson to his pitching staff, will also be welcomed by local fans. But the question is who will go, if Jackson is secured from Charlotte. Manager Murphy has bzeen trying to land Jackson all summer. When Murphy some time ago called on Felix Hayman for pitching material, he was undecided as which of two to send—Jackson or Shoaf, but finally sent Shoaf, who has been trying to land Jackson all son is secured it will probably lie between Harris and Maitland as to who will be given the gate, for McWhirter, Shoaf and Wilson are dependable twirlers. Maitland with a good hitting team would be winning more games but Harris has been knocked out in the last four games early in the contest.

For the Game's Sake

CHICAGO, June 10.—Weather conditions that prevailed in the course of the western conference track meet at Staggfield, were even less favorable than those obtaining at Cambridge a week ago, at the I. C. A. A games, because of the raw chilling wind, which Lake Michigan wafted over this city.

There was wind, plenty of it, cavorting about the Harvard stadium, but at least the sun was shining whereas in Chicago this week-end the poetically minded, with all poetic fervor could ask what is so raw as a day in June.

This being so it is the more creditable that one world's record and two conference records were shattered.

With both the great eastern and western track and field bodies suffering from adverse elemental conditions comparisons of the various times made and distances achieved cannot be very accurate, but they are herewith presented for what they are worth benefit of those who got great store by the watch and the tape measure, and are likely to overlook the atmosphere and the human equation.

Of the fifteen events then the athletes competing in the I. C. A. A. A. A., meet at the Harvard stadium excelled in four track events while the the I. C. A. A. A. A. won in five of the field events and the Big Ten athletes in three.

For the conference DeHart Hubbard, of Michigan won the century in 9 4-5. Evans, of Illinoiswon the 220 dash in 21 3-5 second.

I. C. A. A. A. time sfor the 100 and 220 dashes were ten seconds and 21 9-10 seconds respectively.

Easterners did better in the 440-880, mile and two miles as follows: Helffrich, Penn State 50 1-10 in the quarter against 50 2-5 in the conference meet. Watters, Harvard, 1:55 8-10 in the half against 1:57 in the Big Ten games. Enck, Penn State, 4:23 8-10 in the mile against 4.26 4-5 in the conference meet. Booth, Johns Hopkins, 9:26 in the two miles against the conference showing of 9:43.

In the two hurdles, conference athletes excelled, viz, Kinsey, Illinois 15 seconds in the 120 hurdles against 15 2-10 at the I. C. A. A. A. A meet Brooklus, of Iowa, 23 4-5 in the 220 low hurdles against 24 5-10 in the east Brookins established, by the way a new American record.

In the field events, Hubbard of Michigan did the running broad at 24 feet 10 3-4 inches The eastern distance was 24 feet 8 inches In the high jump Campbell, of Minnesota and Smith of of Michigan were tied at 6 feet 3 inches. Young Thurston Shines On Slab For White Hose

CHICAGO, June 10.—One of the biggest sensations of the early season in the American League has been Hollis Thurston, White Sox pitcher Thurston's performance on the mound has exceeded expectations. And then some!

At present he ranks as the one best bet on the Comiskey twirling staff. With Urban Faber ailing, Thurston has stepped into the breach and made good with a vengeance. In a recent series with the Yankees the big fellow literally stood the Huggins outfit on its head.

Thurston came to the White Sox last year from the Browns. All told, he worked in 46 games, winning seven and losing eight. He allowed 3 12 earned runs per game and was eighth in this respect. He stood well down the list in giving bases on balls, issuing 38, only hit one batter all season and didn't make a single wild pitch.

For a pitcher, Thurston is an exceptionally good batter. He hit .316 in 1923. Uhle, Cleveland, and Walberg, Athletics, were the only hurlers to obtain a higher clouting average.

Whether Thurston will keep up his good work is problematical. He may, and then again he may not. At any rate, his work has been one of the bright spots in the White Sox play to date.

SIDELIGHTS ON CONVENTION OF G. O. P. NOW ON

Small Compares Meet With That of 1920—"King Makers" Gone

By ROBERT T. SMALL

(Copyright, 1924, by The Bee)

CLEVELAND, O., June 10.—Where are the "king makers" of yesteryear? What has become of the powerful little group of statesmen which could meet in the back room of a hotel, or any other place and say just what a Republican convention should do? Four years ago they were in their glory. Today they are scattered to the four winds. Small wonder then that the Cleveland convention seems different.

Call the roll of the president-makers of 1920. They met in the Blackstone hotel in Chicago early on a Saturday morning when the delegates and the casual observers through the convention was in a serious deadlock. There was Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and ex-Senator Murray Crane, of the same state; "Pussyfoot" they used to call him There was Senator Smoot, of Utah; Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, and there was the all-powerful Senator Penrose on the far end of a long-distance telephone listening in his sick room at Atlantic City. There was George Harvey, the journalist, who had "made" Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson before he turned Republican to "make Warren G. Harding. There was Will H. Hays, of Indiana, chairman of the Republican national committee, and last but by no means least there was Harry M. Daugherty, of Ohio, the very man who had predicted from the beginning that the nomination of 1920 would go to the winner of the back room conference.

Death laid a heavy hand upon that assemblage. Murray Crane was first to go, then Knox and then Penrose. Four of the others are here in Cleveland, but they are scattered among the crowds far from the throne room or even the approaches to the seats of the mighty.

There is Senator Lodge, all powerful in the selection of a candidate from Ohio four years ago, but not consulted today about any detail of the candidacy of a man from his home state. Few persons realize the full extent of the political ignominy whic hhas come to the senior senator from the land of the sacred cod. For 24 years Henry Cabot Lodge has been a masterful figure at his party conventions. He actually has presided over three of the last six national gatherings. The was permanent chairman at Philadelphi ain 1900 when McKinley first was named. He wielded the gavel again in 1908 when Taft first was named, and he steered the ship of the G. O. P. at Chicago four years ago when Warren Harding received what proved to be a sentence of death.

In the intervening conventions Cabot Lodge either was chairman of the resolutions committee, which drafted the platform, or held other high office. It has remained for 1924 to see his fall from grace. It is asserted that he has failed to support President Coolidge and he is paying the penalty. He has been bereft of almost everything except his vote and that he must cast for the Hon. Calvin Coolidge.

Senator Smoot is here also, but like his colleague from the old Bay State, he is no longer in the inner circles. His state delegation still is loyal to him, however, and he has been given the committee membership of his own selection Mr. Smoot would like to have a good word said for the senate in the platform, but he will not be surprised if he is disappointed.

Harry M. Daugherty, ex-attorney general, is here as a delegate at large from Ohio. This was an honor he could not win when he was "making" a president, but it has come to him at the hands of the pepole of his state after his resignation from the cabinet was requested.

Mr Daugherty is very "regular" and is going along with his delegation, ready to vote solemnly and solidly for Mr. Coolidge when the day of the balloting begins. But the Coolidge "machine" heeds him not.

Colonel George Harvey, the president-maker extraordinary and president-breaker plenipotentiary, is here in all the glory of his new occupation as the editorin-chief of a daily newspaper. The Colonel arrived with a couple of secretaries, a valet, and a retinue of reports. He came out on a train from Washington with Frank W. Stearns, of the Coolidge campaign cabinet, but never the twain did meet. There will be no conferences in the Colonel's rooms in Cleveland, only the busy click of a couple of versaill eand volatile typewriters.

Perhaps the colonel is waiting to do his stuff at the New York convention later in the month. It may be the Democrats turn.

This accounts for all but one of the president-makers of 1920. The missing one is Will H. Hays. Some how or other the party seems determined to carry on this year without this little Napoleon of politics Mr. Hays deserted some three years ago to go into the movies and since that time has been spending most of his busy moments in Hollywood and New York Between absenting himself from Indiana and not living long enough in the other two places Mr. Hays got left in the scramble year and is not among those present or fully accounted for.

Sic transit gloria politicus—or words to that effect.

The usual 'color," the hurrah, the zip and the boom are missng from this convention. There was no organized boosters, no marching clubs, no torchlight processions. One band blew into town from somewhere on Sunday morning and played a couple of tunes in the rain. Then it seemed to get frightened at its own poise and hurried away to shelter and silence.

The lack of color is due to the fact that there are no candidates. Mr. Coolidge doesn't need any bands or banners. A few pictures—small lithographs—adorn the pillars of the hotel lobbies. But that is all. There are no other pictures anywhere—no other candidates with visible means of support. Usually the hotel lobbies at convention time are a veritable picture gallery.

Four dancing elephants, magnificent specimens of the mastodon, are performing at a local vaudeville theater. Between turns they parade the streets and trumpet in front of the Coolidge headquarters at the hotel Cleveland.

Convention special trains make strange car-fellows. Coming out from Washington was Senator Wadsworth, of New York, who originally was slated for permanent chairman, and former Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, who succeeded to the job.

Young "T. R." was on the same train. He carried his own grip through the station at Washington, and once aboard the train he "shucked" his coat and went about visiting all evening in his shirt sleeves.

Just as all the visiting newspaper men were remarking that anyway the Democratic convention at New York wouldn't be cool and cut and died, Tom Love, of Texas, original McAdoo man blew into Cleveland. "What's all this talk about McAdoo not having enough delegates to win?" he demanded. "Why its all over but the shouting. The Democratic convention is going to be just like this one—all fixed up before hand."

The first casualty of the convention occurred at the Hollenden hotel where the egg boiling machine broke down under the strain. The delegates had to switch to sunny sides up or scrambled. This doesn't mean there are plenty of hard boiled in town. Au contraire, as the French would say.

Good Shoes—Good Laws

By JAMES LUCEY
Shoemaker Friend of Pres. Coolidge.

JAMES LUCEY

CLEVELAND, June 10.—Now I don't pretend to know much about the ins and outs of politics and party conventions, but I have mended many a shoe and every shoe I mended gave me pause for thought. While I mended shoes I thought about the world and the men in it and the shoes they wear.

I have been called the shoe philosopher, and I have been pointed out as the man who made Calvin Coolidge. Now that is a lot of foolishness, for there is only one man who can make a great man and that is the man himself. Calvin Coolidge made Calvin Coolidge. If he was influenced by friends and advisers it was his ability to select the best friends and advisers, and that is a quality of greatness.

Whatever I have been called, I am a shoemaker. I am leading up to the fact that I know something about shoes and that it was shoes that brought me to Cleveland.

Shoes brought Calvin Coolidge and me together 31 years ago. He came with a pair of shoes to be mended. We got to know each other and I saw then that Coolidge was destined to be a great man

Speaking of great men, there are great men and there are men who wear bad shoes. I say this seriously, candidly, that down in Washington there must be some men who suffer from bad feet.

Our great senators and our congressmen sometimes make good laws and good speeches, and other times they have fallen arches and corns.

If you think I am fooling about this, step on a man's corn and watch the pain shoot into his head. The pain in a man's foot is felt in his head and whne a man has a pain in the head it can't work its best.

So when we have a bad law don't you think it would be fair to blame the man's shoemaker?

Wouldn't it be a good idea to procide our representatives with good shoes?

To remedy the nation's ills, if we have any, I prescribe good shoes. Bad shoes make sore feet and sore feet make cross-patches and cross-patches can't make good laws

So it is in Cleveland here where the great men are gathering to pick a man for president whom I discovered years ago If these men have good shoes, if their arches are standing as nature built them, if they have no corns, then their job of making a platform will be as easy as their job of picking a president.

Funny Outfit In Chaplin's Home Was Not a Still

(By The Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, June 10.—Members of the District Attorney "dry squad" raided Charlie Chaplin's home in Beverly Hills yesterday and found that the motion picture actor's cellar was crowded with queer copper pipes and with a contraption with a gas flame burning beneath it.

They learned, however, that the queer boiler and the copper coils, constituted a water softening device.

Beverly Hills water is too hard for domestic use, Chaplin's representatives explained.

Egoism Leopold's Downfall

JOHN LEVINSON, 9, SON OF DAVID LEVINSON, CHICAGO ATTORNEY, WAS MARKED FOR DEATH BY RICHARD LOEB AND NATHAN LEOPOLD, BUT ROPERT FRANKS HAPPENED ALONG CONVENIENTLY, AND HE, INSTEAD OF THE LEVINSON BOY, SERVED THEIR PURPOSE.

By A. H. FREDERICK

MARTINEZ, Cal., June 9.— "He never sought the spectacular, but his supressed egoism had to find an outlet—had to prove to himself that he was above the average

"Doubtlessly he sought this proof in murder, attempting to be the author of the most insoluble murder of the century.

"It was Nathan's destiny not to be the average—to be either great as a good man, or as a bad man. He has fulfilled his destiny."

Such are the views of Mrs. Pauline Van Den Bosch, former nurse-companion of Nathan Leopold, Chicago millionaire's son, who has confessed his part in the kidnaping and murder of Robert Franks.

Lacked Real Childhood

Mrs Van Dean Bosch paints a picture of a pathetic little outcast, surrounded by every luxury money could buy, but lacking a true childhood

"In Nathan's boyhood," she explains "the child fathered the man. is egoism might have been directed into most wholesome channels, but it was neglected and misdirected. That is why Nathan is in the shadow of the gallows today

"He was a lad of strong personality —one requiring the most careful development along proper channels."

Nathan was committed to Mrs Van Den Bosch's care when he was 12. She remembers him as a little undersized fellow, with piercing black eyes and bushy unmanageable hair.

"His temper would flare up into a very volcano of abuse for those who displeased him in the slightest way," she says. "He had an uncanny ability to say cutting things—things intended to wound and whch dd wound

"Marooned"

"Often I have seen bim reduce his mother to a flood of tears. But even her tears failed to move him a particle.

"It was his precociousness, his pride that was his curse. His feebleness of physique and smallness of stature, as compared with other boys his own age, made him an unfit playfellow for them

"And his mature mind (that of a man of 20 when he was only 12) made him unwelcome among boys younger than himself. He was marooned quite alone in the sea of his own abnormality, or rather subnormality

Thus he turned to books for solace, weighty books of study such as heavy tomes on psychology, and books on birds.

"Many an afternoon he and I tramped the fields for a fleeting glimpse of some rare specimen. I never knew him to torture or needlessly kill an animal or bird. But his rage became tyrannical when he saw I could not master some bit of scientific terminology of bird lore as quickly as he had done

All Money He Wanted

"His mother was a wonderful woman. She was so busy, however, with her husband and staff of eight time for Nathan. She failed to understand his imperative need for kindly companionship.

"And the father idolized "Babe" (that is what his family always called him) He gave him spending money in unstinted measure. Yet he was too absorbed in his business to give him any of his time

"Nor could "Babe" pal around with his brothers They were so much older One then was 17, the other 22."

MORNING STOCK LETTER
Thomson & McKinnon

NEW YORK, June 10.— Today, the all-important news will be the tonnage report of the United States Steel Crporation. It is generally expected that the tonnage will show an important decrease. It would be exceedingly surprising if it was otherwise. The most pessimistic reports have been received from steel centers. Some in the industry have expressed the view that operations in the very near future may show another decline, forty per cent., or under is named as a likely figure. All of this sounds exceedingly bearish.

The point of interest to you as a stockholder is what response this will receive from the stock market. When the news is so very, very bearish as it is at present, I would rather be guided by the stock market than by the industrial reports, because the stock market will tell us in no uncertain way to what extent all this has been discounted. And if it has been discounted and the market able to take care of itself under these conditions, only one thing remains and that is to buy stocks.

An Interesting Discourse

The American Indian Had Defective Eyes

Cultivated Classes Have No Worse Eyes Than the Illiterate, But They Realize Their Misfortune—Eye Defects May Cause Disorders of the Body.

The remarkable increase in the use of glasses has given rise in some minds to an apprehension that the eyesight of the race is suffering deterioration, that civilization and modern methods of life are weakening a formerly perfect organ. This fear is unfounded. More glasses are worn because the eye, its needs and its relation to the brain, are now understood to a degree undreamed of even three decades ago. The study of the eye—technically called optometry—has progressed by phenomenal strides, vying with the modern phases of surgery.

There is a commonly accepted assumption that the eyes of a large race possess no defects. We are frequently told that the American Indian was a stranger to the ravages of the forest or the shoreless expanses of prairie, had no need of glasses to keep his marksmanship true. This is a popular fallacy, but a well [illegible] which the [illegible] power of adjusting the eye for long distance [illegible] in other words, that [illegible] naturally at a long range, [illegible] of near objects was [illegible] With this assertion [illegible] number of spectacles [illegible] apprehension.

All physical conditions are dependent upon the brain and the nerve forces.

NEW YORK STOCKS.
(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 10.—Stock prices displayed a firm undertone at the opening of today's stock market. Easy money rates proved an incentive to buying, which was particularly effective in the lo wpriced rails and sugar shares. General Electric and American Sugar pfd. each moved up more than a point while Missouri Pacific common and pfd. advanced fractionally to a new 1924 top. Republic Steel pfd. broke 1 1-2 points to its lowest price of the year.

Failure of some of the large oil companies to follow the lead of Magnolia in reducing mid-continent crude prices and another decline in California production revived interest in the oil shares which gave a good exhibition of group strength. New Orleans, Texas and Mexico climbed 2 1-2 points and New York Dock and Colorado and Southern each, the last named touching a new high for the year. Consolidated Gas was again the outstanding strong spot among the public utilities. There were only a few new weak spots, chief of which was Utah Copper, which dropped a point.

NEW YORK COTTON.
(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 10.—Private reports of rains in the south were followed by an opening advance of 9 to 17 points in the cotton market today. A little selling on the relatively easy showing of earlier Liverpool cables was readily absorbed, prices advancing to 28.00 for July and 25.75 for October in the early trading or 34 to 37 points net higher. Sellers on better weather reports yesterday appeared to be buying on the advance but offerings increased slightly at the higher prices and gains were not fully maintained.

MORNING COTTON LETTER
Thomson & McKinnon

NEW YORK, June 10.— Liverpool slightly easier. The South has had the warmest weather of the season past two days and crop news is becoming less doleful.

The forecast is for scattered showers in all cotton states, cooler in the Northwest sections.

Business in Worth Street generally is quiet since cotton broke last week but there were sales Friday and Saturday of two and half million yards of sheeting.

MUSIC

Nothing is lasting. Change is eternal and constant. The greatest mountain every second becomes smaller as rain washes it away to the sea. And the sea, in turn, is slowly filling up.

Just when a man thinks he has achieved something, he finds the forces of disintegration attacking him. Phonograph makers built up a giant industry, sold two and a quarter million machines and 107 million records in 1920. They felt secure.

Then came the radio craze. It has put half of the phonograph makers out of business, fewer than 100 surviving. The two industries are joining hands. What will come along and crowd radio to the corner? Something, that's inevitable.

CHEAPER

Edison put the incandescent electric light on the market in 1879. Four years later, rates became uniform at 20 cents a kilowatt hour. The price today, for small consumers, averages eight cents—or less than half what it originally was.

The same is true of thousands of other articles. When people say cost of living has doubled, they refer to food, clothing, rent and other basic items. Ingenuity in manufacturing has lowered more other prices than any of us realize. Can't compare our cost of living with grandpa's, for he didn't have a hundredth of the things we use and consider indispensable.

HAT

Cork hats are on the market. Lighter than straw. Easily cleaned. Shape themselves to the head.

Maybe you've noticed the increasing number of articles made of cork. Behold the cork industry ingeniously turning its talents to new fields to compensate for business lost through prohibition.

An industry never admits failure. It merely shifts its tactics in another direction. So should individuals, foiled.

READING

Heaven help us, several colleges have installed courses teaching book agents how to ply their trade. Fortunately, they specialize at selling from behind the counter in stores.

And that job requires education. More so steadily, say speakers at a convention of book dealers. They find people are "thinking more," increasingly buying volumes on serious subjects. And movies and radio have stimulated book sales instead of durtailing them as many once expected.

STEEL

We still live in the Age of Steel. And this country of ours last year made over three-fifths of the world's pig iron, from which steel is manufactured.

In one recent month Americans made almost as much pig iron as in the entire year 1881.

Pride in country begins with knowledge of its strength and power. In iron and steel, at least, we're more important than all the est of the world combined.

FUTURE

A bottle holds just so many drinks. The ground contains just so much iron ore, copper, coal, oil, gas and soil fertility.

We're using up these natural resources fast. They exist in such gigantic quantities that it'll be a thousand years or more before they're exhausted. But humanity has many thousands of years to live. Problem of making a living will become increasingly difficult.

JAP PHYSICIAN AND EXPLOSIVE EXPERT PINCHED

Denies Formulars for Bombs Had Any Connection With Exclusion Act.

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 10.—Dr. Asamu Terada, Japanese physician and explosive expert, whose apartment was raided last night by police who said they found formulas and diagrams for making high explosives, today was being held in $1,500 bail on a charge of possessing a revolver in violation of the sullivan law, a state statute forbidding possession of concealed weapons.

Terada, who said he was gradiated from a medical college in Osaka and studied at the Johns Hopkins Medical College denied that the formulas and diagrams were for construction of bombs. They had been written down in 1916, he said, and had no relation whatever to the Japanese exclusion act. He explained that since he was interested in explosives he naturally engaged at times in making formulas.

He was arrested as a result of an annoymous letter received by the police two week sago. Neighbors informed the police that an unusual number of Japnese were visiting Dr. Terada apartment. After watching the place several days the police decided to investigate.

Detectives of the bomb squad who made the raid said they found the revolver, a .25 calibre German made automatic and also the sheets containing the formulas and diagrams, in a trunk.

Although Terada said he did not practice medicine, not having a license here, the police said they seized a number of prescription blanks bearing his name as physician.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.
(By The Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, June 10.—The cotton market opened a shade better but comparatively quiet. First trades were 3 to 8 points above the previous close. Right after the opening call there was a spurt of buying based on a better Liverpool than expected and private reports of scattered rains in the belt which started shorts to covering. Prices advanced sharply, July trading up to 28.05, October to 24.87 and December to 24.62, or 29 to 35 points above the closing of yesterday. The market ruled steady at the advance, waiting for the weather map.

What's Going on in the World
WEEK'S CHIEF EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

It may look as if the Republican convention this month will be pretty tame, because it's practically certain whom the presidential nominee will be. But if the insurgents turn down the convention's choice it will be a history-making development. It will be more important than the Bull Moose movement in 1912, because a third ticket this time is liable to shake the old parties to pieces.

TWO NEW PARTIES?

Politicians are wondering whether the candidacy of La Follette or some other insurgent would draw more heavily from the Republicans or the Democrats. On the face of it, it looks as if the Republicans would suffer most so far as this next election is concerned. But the point is that such a development's tendency, in the long run, will be to attract the progressive voters from both old parties into the new one. And then the tendency of the regulars in both old parties will be to combine. Result: Two new parties.

WHAT CAN THEY DO?

Will there be a third ticket? La Follette's recent announcement sounds like it. The insurgents don't like Coolidge any too well, but they probably would make the best of him—on a radical platform. However, they're sure to get a conservative one. With both an unsatisfactory nominee and an unsatisfactory platform, what is there left for them to do but name their own candidate? Well, they might indorse the Democratic ticket, but there isn't much chance they'll like it any better than the Republicans.

KEEPING IT UP

The Senate's Daugherty investigating committee is keeping right on with its work up to the last minute before the convention. Daugherty himself has been called for June 6, only four days before the Cleveland gathering opens. His testimony probably will take several days. It may make him miss the convention. He's a delegate-at-large from Ohio and wants to attend. But the radical investigators don't care anything about the convenience of politicians—either Republican or Democratic. From all appearances they mean to continue their activities all through the campaign.

ANOTHER NUISANCE

The radicals also want a committee to sit during the entire pre-election period to investigate campaign contributions, just as they come in. The old party managers don't like this. If nothing worse, it will be a bother, forcing them to be extremely particular about every cent that goes into their treasuries.

JAPAN

Tokyo's protest against the exclusion of Japanese immigrants from America is simply a way of keeping the record straight. Japan doesn't expect the United States to do anything about it. Probably the first step the Japanese will take toward "getting even" will be in the direction of keeping American goods, as far as possible, not only out of Japan, but out of the Far East generally—a boycott, wherever it can be made effective.
